Bomb-building tools traced to theater office

by JOE SWICKARD

The tools believed used in the construction of the dynamite bomb that was detonated at the Arlington Park Theater Thursday came from a tool set in the theater manager's office.

Arlington Heights police investigating the bombing said preliminary tests of a screwdriver and a pair of wire cutters found at the scene show marks that match ones found on parts of the time bomb. Police also said the tools came from a toolbox kept in the manager's office near the light control panel where the bomb was set.

Det. Sgt. Rodney Kath said the toolbox was easily accessible to someone once they entered the backstage area. Kath said no usable fingerprints were obtained from the tools.

THE BOMB, DYNAMITE wired to a dry cell battery and a digital alarm clock, blew up the theater's lighting control panel. Police also discovered evidence of attempted arson and sabotage.

Theater seats had been soaked in gasoline near the bomb, but did not ignite. A small fire was set in a storage loft in a supply of aerosol cans, but did not spread.

Steel cables supporting the theater's hanging ceiling had been cut, leading police to speculate that the bomber intended the force of the blast to bring it down.

The managements of the theater and the adjoining Arlington Park Hilton Hotel were questioned separately Thursday about the blast.

David Lonn, theater manager and a principal in Keep Productions, was called back for further questioning Friday night by police.

DET. PATRICK KENNEDY said the questioning of Lonn would be for "background information only."

Kennedy said no lie detector tests are being planned.

Lonn and the hotel management are joined in counter lawsuits over an alleged contract violation by Lonn.

The hotel management and attorneys from Madison Square Garden Corp., owners of the hotel-race track complex, went to court Friday in an attempt to hve quashed an injunction allowing Keep Productions to continue operating the theater.

JUDGE DONALD J. O'BRIEN, presiding judge of the Chancery division, set Tuesday as the date for a rehearing of his injunction order.

Investigators are still trying to determine the time of the bomb attack and the sequence of events.

Members of the Free Street Theater troupe, appearing at the theater, left the building about 11 p.m. Wednesday after a performance. They were the last people known to have been inside the building before the blast.

There were reports that an explosion was heard in the area about 1:30 a.m. Thursday, 12 hours before the incident was first reported to the fire department.

HOWEVER, INVESTIGATORS said there were indications that the fires had been set within four hours of the discovery early Thursday afternoon by a maintenance worker.

Kennedy said "one thought" being pursued is the possibility that the bomber returned to the theater and set the fire in the loft after the dynamite charge failed to level the building.

Kennedy and Kath said there was conflicting evidence about whether the attack was the work of a "professional" bomber or arsonist.

Kennedy said professional arsonists seldom use gasoline because of its highly volatile and unstable character. However, the construction of the bomb showed its maker was familiar with high explosives, he said.

Kath said the use of the theater's tools to assemble the bomb could have been done to eliminate the need to "dump" other tools that could be traced back to the purchaser.

Happy days return

Sox and fans winners on opening day

by BOB GALLAS

The organ was playing "Happy Days Are Here Again," Minnie Minoso was back on the field and, HOLY COW, even Harry was back up in the radio booth.

A la shades of 1959, the Chicago White Sox regained their "go-go" title and restored Bill Veeck to the hero's pedestal he vacated 15 years ago, as the third largest opening day crowd in the team's history had a good time and even saw what last year was a rarity — a White Sox 4-0 win.

The baseball fans, many of whom were sisk, bereaved or had serious car trouble — or so they told their bosses — came expecting the unexpected and that's what they got as Sox owner Veeck continued to show he's the nearest thing to P.T. Barnum.

COMING FROM ALL over Illinois and four other Midwest states . . . nobody went home disappointed.

Today

"The kids wanted to come down," said Vern Winkelhake of Arlington Heights, who brought his son Terry and two friends to the game. "Of course they didn't have to talk too hard to convince me, I guess."

The biggest hit of the day was Veeck and field manager Paul Richards, who along with Sox business manager Rudi Schaffer, marched out onto the field in full 1776 era costume.

And Sox radio-television legend Harry Caray returned to the booth — much to the delight of the fans who mobbed him wherever he walked. Stopping to sign autographs every few steps, Caray seemed to be enjoying the whole scene, giving each admirer his signature or a hearty "how ya doin?"

THOUGH MANY OF THE fans had offered excuses of "illness" earlier in the day, they seemed much better as gametime approached and the sun climbed high enough to provide some warmth in the 55-degree temperatures.

One young man from Mount Prospect went a little pale when he discovered he was talking to a Herald reporter.

"You're going to put this in the paper! ARE YOU KIDDING? My boss thinks I'm home in bed with a 103 degree temperature," he said, pleading for anonymity.

It was an intimate gathering of fun seekers — that is, if you call a crowd of 40,000 intimate. Opposite to the stereotyped Sox fan known for reserve, the crowd sang with the organ music, kept the beer vendors hopping despite the cold and was on its feet cheering for the last out three pitches before it came.

THE ATTENDANCE, 40,318, may spell better times for the team which sagged badly last year, or may just indicate the enormous amount of curiosity Veeck has generated among Chicago area baseball fans.

"He (Veeck) mystifies me," said Ken Bartholomew of Highland, Ind., who brought a group of

School board elections today; polls open at noon

Thousands of Northwest suburban residents will go to the polls today to select board of education members in elementary, high school and community college district elections.

Polls will be open from noon to 7 p.m. in all precincts except those in Maine Township, which will be open from noon to 7:30 p.m.

Voters must be at least 18 years old and have lived in their school district for at least 28 days. Persons may still register to vote at their village or city halls until noon today.

Poll books are not used in school elections, although voters are required to sign an affidavit stating they have registered to vote.

SIXTEEN OF THE 17 Northwest suburban school districts will have contested elections today with only Prospect Heights Dist. 23 uncontested.

The large number of contested elections in the elementary districts appears to be in response to teacher cutbacks and the elimination and reduction of programs by boards attempting to balance budgets despite financial and enrollment problems. Cutbacks are being planned by most elementary districts, two schools have been closed this week and more cuts are projected in future years.

All four high school districts in the area are also contested. Only High School Dist. 125 in Lake County has a major issue this year. The district superintendent recently resigned under pressure from some board members who are dissatisfied with test scores and the quality of education in the district.

At the community college level, campus construction is one of the main issues being voiced by candidates. Harper College, Palatine, soon will be faced with a decision on whether to build a second campus on their recently acquired site at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads, Arlington Heights. Oakton College, now located in Morton Grove, has just started construction on its permanent campus in Des Plaines.

Special phone for school vote

The results of today's school and college board elections will be available from The Herald after 10 p.m. by calling 394-1700.

Complete election results will be recorded as they are phoned to the Herald newsroom and will be available through Sunday. News stories on the school board races will appear in the Monday edition.

Sparked by Russian might

House OKs $33 billion arms bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House, reflecting administration concern over growing Soviet naval strength, Friday approved a $33.3 billion weapons bill, including nine new-generation ships the Navy didn't request.

The Russian threat was used again and again in debate before the House passed the measure 298 to 52.

The action followed defeat of amendments to postpone production of the B1 bomber, reduce overseas troop strength, bar the Pentagon from closing a series of military bases throughout the country and postpone building an aircraft carrier.

The only amendment that carried cut $170 million for cargo planes that could land on aircraft carriers.

President Ford's budget request called for 16 ships, including eight escort frigates — relatively unsophisticated ships costing $72.7 million each. It also requested money to develop a guided missile destroyer with a gas turbine engine, less expensive than a nuclear power plant.

The House Armed Services Committee cut four frigates and the missile destroyer, saying it wanted to reaffirm congressional support for a nuclear Navy.

It added four sophisticated destroyers, money for two nuclear-powered guided missile cruisers, one nuclear attack submarine, one Trident missile-firing submarine, and plans for another nuclear aircraft carrier.

The price: $6.8 billion as compared with the requested $4.6 billion.

"We felt we should get ahead with the very expensive ships," said Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla.

Navy sources said the changes showed the influence of Adm. Hyman Rickover, who fought to bring about a nuclear Navy.

In its report, the Armed Services Committee said: "The Congress, rather than the Dept. of Defense, has always been in the lead where nuclear powered naval vessels are concerned.

More woes for First Arlington

$1 million boat dispute hits bank

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT and KURT BAER

A dispute over an estimated $1 million in boats, which were removed from a Palatine store by officials of First Arlington National Bank, moved Friday from Texas to Palatine.

The owner of Barney's Boats of Chicago, 1140 E. Northwest Hwy., Palatine, asked Palatine police to investigate removal of about 60 boats, furniture and other property from the store.

Barney Kogen, owner of the store and a former resident of Northbrook, told police that bank officials violated a court order and removed the boats Feb. 21.

A bank spokesman has denied violating a court order.

KOGEN'S FIRM, which is in Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization hearings in Texas, faces a mortgage foreclosure suit by the bank in Cook County and has filed a $1 million complaint against the bank in Texas for violating a purported bankruptcy court protection order.

Kogen met with Palatine police at the store, which was empty of boats and furniture, about noon Friday.

"No charges were placed," Palatine Police Chief Jerry Bratcher told The Herald, which is investigating charges concerning the bank.

"This is a very complicated situation which is entangled in civil litigation," Bratcher said. "The state's attorney who is handling it won't be back in town until Monday."

Bratcher said that "reasonable grounds" are needed for filing of a criminal theft complaint. "This is not an emergency," he said, adding that the boats were removed more than six weeks ago.

"WE RESPONDED to a call," Bratcher said. "We have filed reports and have contacted the state's attorney."

Kogen hired a locksmith to open the store Friday because the locks had been changed. A spokesman for the bank, who asked not to be identified, told The Herald that the store roof was leaking and that the building was unlocked when the boats were removed. The bank official said that the boats have not been sold.

"I am a trustee" for the bankruptcy reorganization, Kogen said. "A 'stay' (court order) means that nobody can touch or tamper or do anything with this entire piece of property." Kogen paid the locksmith, who is listed as a creditor in the bankruptcy case, in cash.

The Herald reported Thursday that First Arlington National Bank, the fourth largest bank in the Northwest suburbs, is defending against two multimillion dollar court complaints and has settled another suit out of court.

THE FBI reportedly is investigating the financial dealings of one bank official, and federal bank examiners are overseeing operation of the bank after questioning millions of dollars of loans by the bank.

Rumors about an investigation of the bank reportedly were aired at a closed-door meeting of the Arlington Heights Village Board Feb. 16. The meeting was called to discuss appointment of Bank Vice President Bruce H. Dodds to the police pension board.

Trustees Friday declined comment about specifics of the 45-minute closed-door discussion. However, several board members said they thought at the time that rejecting Dodds' nomination would support the rumors.

Dodds was appointed by unanimous vote of the trustees following the executive session.

The police pension fund consists of a tax levy, 7.5 per cent contribution of participants' salaries and investment income. The fund balance is $2.8 million.

Dodds was first proposed for the pension board at a Feb. 2 village board meeting by Village Pres. James T. Ryan. Dodds was treasurer of Ryan's 1975 election campaign.

THE APPOINTMENT was tabled by Trustee Frank Palmatier and brought up again Feb. 16, when, at Palmatier's request, the board adjourned to executive session.

In most instances, resumes of persons proposed for village office are distributed to board members prior to consideration of the nomination. In Dodds' case, no biographical resume was supplied.

"My recollection is that there were some unsubstantiated rumors, but not involving a federal investigation," Ryan said Friday.

"There was also some concern about conflict of interest and whether any of these (police pension) funds would be controled by the (First Arlington National) Bank or whether there would be any profit to the bank. And we were assured that there would not be," he said.

Ryan said it is not uncommon for the village president or other board members to hear rumors or get telephone calls that are disparaging of persons nominated for a village government position.

"THERE WERE what seemed to be some unfounded allegations, and some of us felt that by accepting that we would be putting a stamp of approval on vicious accusations," Trustee David Griffin said Friday.

Trustee Madeline Schroeder concurred in Griffin's explanation, saying that rejection of Dodds would have fueled rumors about the bank's troubles.

"We were put in a position where we really had no choice," she said.

Trustee Richard Durava and Palmatier, who also were contacted Friday, declined to comment on the executive session.

Woman found beaten, unconscious

A 41-year-old Wheeling Township woman was in critical condition Friday after Cook County Sheriff's Police found her lying unconscious along Milwaukee Avenue about a half-mile north of Palatine Road.

Sheriff's police said they found Joanne Szczesny, 916 E. Old Willow Rd., along the road at about 5 a.m. Friday, and the Wheeling Fire Dept. rushed her to Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines. Police said the woman apparently had been beaten and thrown from a car.

Police said they have no suspects.

A hospital spokesman said the woman suffered head injuries and remained unconscious in the hospital's intensive care unit until late Friday.

Syrian troops cross into Lebanon, war escalates

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Syrian troops crossed into Lebanon Friday and seized three border checkpoints from leftist forces in what appeared to be a major escalation of Syria's efforts to impose its own brand of peace on its wartorn neighbor, official Lebanese and Palestinian sources said.

The checkpoints were along the "Arafat trail," the route long used by Palestinian guerrillas to smuggle weapons into southern Lebanon.

At least 50 persons were killed and 110 wounded over the past 48 hours as new fighting flared across Lebanon, raising the toll for nearly a year of civil war to more than 16,600 dead and 34,150 injured.

The new Moslem-Christian clashes threatened the precarious truce on the eve of a crucial parliament meeting on which American, French and Syrian peace efforts hinged.

Clashes between leftists and pro-Syrian forces wearing the uniforms of the Saiqa Palestinian guerrilla organization were reported in the Bekaa Valley around the Christian city of Zahle 12 miles north of Masnaa.

Another Syrian force — also estimated to be up to an armored brigade in strength — crossed into north Lebanon and took up positions facing those of leftist Lebanese troops around the northern port of Tripoli, 50 miles from Beirut, the sources said.

The sources expressed some surprise at the developments which, despite past Syrian threats to invade Lebanon to restore peace, came unexpectedly on the eve of what appeared might have been the beginning of a political settlement to Lebanon's year-old crisis.

They said the troops apparently did not intend to advance — for the moment at least — much beyond the checkpoints they captured.

Syria has imposed a land and sea blockade on Lebanon in an attempt to keep weapons from reaching Moslem leftist forces and preserve the cease-fire. The Syrian incursion into Lebanese territory indicated that Syria was trying to tighten its blockade.

In another action, leftist army troops manning a tank position outside the U.S. Embassy on Beirut's western uptown coast fired on a cargo ship carrying wheat to the port of Beirut.

Witnesses said the ship was hit once in the aft section but managed to steam out of range and then return to port to unload its cargo.

Fighting in the Bekaa Valley and Mt. Lebanon regions and sniping, looting and arson in Beirut marred efforts to restore security on the eve of the parliamentary meeting. The meeting was called to pass reforms that would pave the way for President Suleiman Franjieh's resignation and the election of a successor.

Ford's life threatened? Woman held on bond

DALLAS (UPI) — A federal judge Friday ordered Sharon Denise Jones Morgan, 27, held on $50,000 bond on a charge she threatened to kill President Ford during a telephone conversation with a policeman she had known for more than 10 years.

U.S. Magistrate Bailey Rankin, noting Ford was due in Dallas within a few hours, appointed an attorney for the Greenville, Tex., woman and ordered the disabled welfare recipient retained in federal custody unless she could raise bond.

Mrs. Morgan said she was innocent and protested the amount of her bail.

"But I don't have that type of money," she said. "How am I going to go about that? I live on $177 a month."

The woman's mother told UPI Mrs. Morgan was an epileptic, had suffered brain damage, threatened suicide and been in a state hospital. She also said Mrs. Morgan had been misunderstood and had not threatened Ford, who was in San Antonio, Tex., during the court session.

Doris Jones said her daughter was living with her and was in the process of getting a divorce. She said Greenville Detective Sgt. David Ewalt, who reported the alleged threat to federal authorities Thursday, misunderstood Mrs. Morgan's comment.

"She called him (Ewalt) about her husband who's been giving her some problems. She said, 'Well, if I can't get anybody else to help me I guess I'll have to write the President and if he won't help me I guess I'll have to kill him.' She was talking about her husband who's been giving her some problems, not the President," Mrs. Jones said.

Rankin scheduled a preliminary hearing on the case for next Wednesday and said the matter would be referred to a federal grand jury.

Mrs. Morgan was accompanied to her arraignment by Secret Service agents but was not handcuffed.

SHARON DENISE Jones Morgan is escorted by a secret service agent at her arraignment on charges of threatening the life of the President.

U.S.-Soviet pact proof of detente, Kissinger says

WASHINGTON (UPI — The U.S. - Soviet agreement on peaceful nuclear blasts proves the superpowers can promote peace even in times of political conflict, Sec. of State Henry Kissinger said Friday.

In so many words, he said the pact proves detente is not dead even though its name has been scrapped in an era of conflict over issues ranging from African warfare to the harassment of U.S. and Soviet diplomats.

"It tells us about this relationship that, with all the tensions and difficulties, we have an obligation to the future to bring the nuclear problem under control," Kissinger told reporters after the agreement was announced.

"I would not overstate its significance, but I would also not underrate the importance to humanity and to our own people of taking common steps to get the nuclear problem under some discipline.

"We want to make sure that peaceful nuclear explosions are not used to mask military purposes."

The Peaceful Nuclear Explosions treaty — "PNE" to diplomats — will revive a mothballed U.S. - Soviet treaty on underground nuclear tests and commits Moscow, finally, to on-site inspection by American test observers.

"This agreement for the first time establishes the principle of on-site inspection in Soviet territory, something which we have been attempting to achieve in the entire post war period," Kissinger said. "Therefore, it is an important symbolic step.

"It also establishes a frame work for the threshhold test ban and in fact concludes that negotiation."

He referred to the U.S. — Soviet agreement of July, 1974, which would ban underground testing of atomic weapons stronger than 150 kilotons — the equivalent 150,000 tons of TNT — in yield as of last March 31.

President Ford has never submitted that treaty for Senate ratification because he wanted a companion agreement — the one concluded Friday — to ensure Moscow cannot disguise underground military tests as nuclear engineering explosions.

The PNE will affect the Soviets most because they have a much more active nuclear engineering program. U.S. environmentalists oppose such programs.

The Soviets use or plan to use atomic blasts to create underground gas storage chambers, divert rivers, dig reservoirs and tunnels and extinguish oil fires.

U.S. officials disclosed few details of how many U.S. observers will be allowed to monitor given Soviet blasts, saying that would be subject to "a complicated mathematical formula."

In general, they would apparently observe multiple blasts in places where U.S. electronic sensors cannot distinguish between military testing and peaceful technological efforts.

The pact must now be reviewed and approved by the two governments and then submitted to the Senate for ratification.

Humphrey gets clean bill of health

A medical report made available Friday shows that Sen. Hubert Humphery, D-Minn., has suffered no recurrence of a possibly cancerous growth in his bladder which required radiation in 1973. The report, prepared after consultations by top urologists, said Humphrey's general health was "excellent" but that "routine follow-up examinations are scheduled at six month intervals." The consultations were held Jan. 20 and the report presumably was prepared in anticipation of inquires about his health should he seek the Democratic presidential nomination or run for re-election.

Energy panel gives fuel hike OK

In a move designed to give the oil companies more money, the Federal Energy Administration revised its rules Friday to permit gasoline and other consumer fuel prices to rise by a penny a gallon. FEA Administrator Frank Zarb said the price change would take place over the next year. The rules revision allows producers to charge higher prices for crude oil and to pass the increases along to consumers. An FEA spokesman said it was designed to stimulate future domestic oil production and to help oil companies cope with inflation.

Postal service tells rate hike

The Postal Service announced Friday new rate increases of up to 33 per cent effective April 18 in the charges for special delivery, money orders, registered mail, insurance and other special services. Under the new schedules, the basic special delivery charge will go from 60 cents to 80 cents; the minimum money order fee from 25 to 30 cents; the certified mail fee from 30 to 40 cents, and the minimum registered mail charge from 95 cents to $1.25.

'Tax Freedom Day' May 1

The average U.S. taxpayer works the first four months of the year just to support federal, state and local governments, the Tax Foundation said Friday. Tongue-in-cheek. the foundation, a nonprofit research organization, declared that this year "Tax Freedom Day" falls on May 1 — "the day when the average taxpayer has finally finished workig just to pay taxes. Our research does not go into taxpayers reactions to their responsibilities to pay taxes," said Bob Brown of the Tax Foundation. "But it would be my guess they are happy and relieved to have completed this obligation."

Robinson takes No. 2 state job

Charles W. Robinson, 56, of San Francisco, was sworn in Friday as deputy Sec. of State, the no. 2 position in the department. Robinson, who has been the department's top economic expert for the last 15 months, is a former businessman who was president of the Marcona Corp. of San Francisco until 1974. He succeeds Robert Ingersoll, who resigned at the end of March to return to private industry.

Eight dead after quake

A sharp earthquake struck the Pacific coastal city of Esmeraldas, Ecuador and surrounding villages early Friday, inflicting heavy damages, radio reports from the stricken area said. The Red Cross said eight persons were known dead and 46 injured in Esmeraldas but that there might be additional casualties in the string of villages in the rain forests around the tropical city.

Millions rally in China

China said millions rallied Friday in support of the nation's leadership shuffle but warned of a continuing struggle by "counter-revolutionary" backers of ousted Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-ping. The Communist party newspaper People's Daily said the demonstrators put a mass stamp of approval on the move that purged Teng and elevated Hua Kuo-Feng to the posts of premier, party first vice chairman and heir apparent to aging Mao Tse-tung. But the newspaper admitted "counter-revolutionary" tendencies persisted in the world's most populous nation.

$33.3 billion Naval arms bill wins House approval

It was the Congress which discerned the need for the advantages of nuclear power in our submarines, aircraft carriers and cruisers."

A high-ranking Navy official commented, "We aren't against nuclear power. We need to improve our fleet so urgently that we need a lot of ships, and nuclear powered ones are expensive and take much longer to construct."

Navy officials have urged construction of additonal ships in speeches and committee briefings, and in small White House gatherings where the rapid growth in Soviet naval power has been presented.

"I listened to a briefing on Soviet naval power and it scared me," said Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif. "The Navy is concerned about the ability of the Soviet Union to destroy shipping at distances from their shores."

"I do not believe that the people of this country want a Navy which is second only to the Russians," said Rep. Floyd Spence, R-S.C.

Child safe after being thrown in river

DERRY, N.H. (UPI) — Seven-year-old Christine Johnson was kidnaped from her bed and tossed from a 60-foot-high bridge early Friday but survived and floated to safety.

Within hours, a distant relative was charged with kidnaping in one state and attempted murder in another and her distraught father was arrested for carrying two pistols as he searched for his daughter, police said.

The tiny blonde, wearing white pajamas, was asleep when she was taken from her mother's home about 2 a.m. She told police that about three hours later she was hurled from a highway bridge into the icy Merrimack River in Haverhill, Mass., 20 miles away.

"I hope you can swim," she told police her abductor said. Police said they knew of no motive for the incident.

Carl C. Lechel, 31, married to a cousin of the child's mother, was arrested at his home in nearby Raymond, N.H. He was charged with kidnaping and held on $50,000 bond. He faced additional charges of attempted murder in neighboring Massachusetts.

"I saw something I thought was a rag doll," said telephone repairman Kenneth Gaudette of Lowell, Mass., who found the child at sunrise, holding onto a cement post near the bridge.

"I ran down the embankment and found her scared and cold and wet . . . she was wearing only her pajamas and had no shoes on." He threw his jacket around the weeping child and flagged down a motorist who called police.

"I know his name was Carl," police said Christine told Gaudette of her kidnaper. "He took me from my bed and put me over there," she said, pointing to the river.

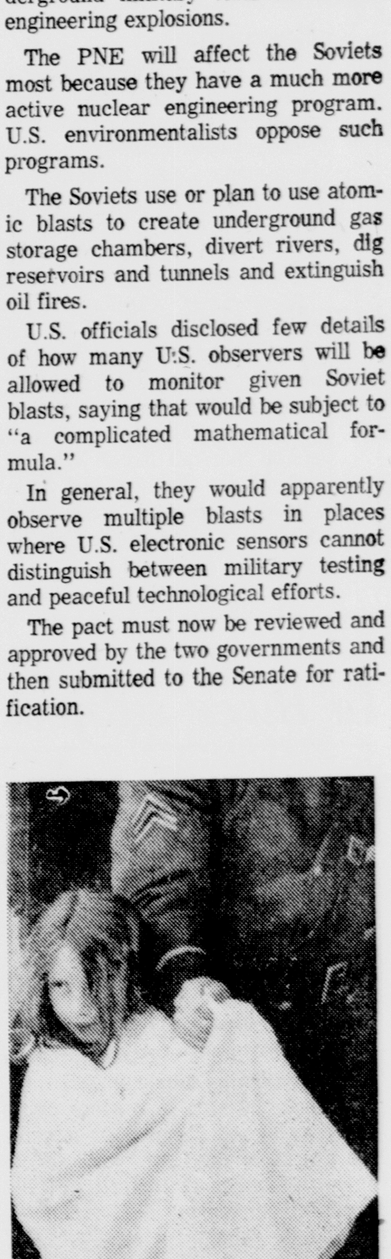
The girl was not sexually assaulted. She was treated at Hale Hospital in Haverhill for bruises on her arms and hips and released, then returned to Derry where she identified Lechel as her abductor.

"Motive is the most puzzling aspect of the case," said Massachusetts State Police Sgt. Robert Sullivan. Derry Patrolman Larry Hamer said, "I honestly don't know, I just don't know," when asked about the motive.

Johnson apparently heard a newscast that his child had been found in the river and rushed to the hospital, where he was arrested by a Massachusetts state trooper who was questioning Christine when Johnson barged into the room. Police said he was carrying two pistols.

He was charged with carrying unregistered firearms, a violation of a strict Massachusetts law that demands an automatic one-year jail term for such an offense. He pleaded innocent and was released on $15,000 bail.

Lechel was given a continuance in a probable cause hearing in U.S. District Court by Judge George Grinell.



WRAPPED IN A blanket and being led by a police officer, 7-year-old Christine Johnson is taken from Hale Hospital in Haverhill, Mass.

Henry Fonda regaining strength

People

• Henry Fonda, recovering from surgery to remove a large benign tumor, is "getting stronger each day" and may be released from Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Hollywood sometime next week, a spokesman said Friday. Fonda, 70, underwent surgery for removal of the tumor, described as "the size of two grapefruits," from his diaphragm March 17. He was in the hospital's intensive care unit for about a week.

• King Carl XVI Gustav of Sweden was greeted by flag waving children and toured Gustavus Adolphus College in St. Peter, Minn. Friday. Several hundred of St. Peter's school children lined a three-block area leading to the main Gustavus Adolphus campus, waving miniature Swedish flags and extending the welcome to the visiting dignitaries. At the main entrance to the campus, the king received flowers from three granddaughters of the late Swedish metropolitan opera star, Jussi Bjorling, for whom the college's concert hall has been named.

• The West Virginia Supreme Court Friday turned down an attempt by Gov. Arch Moore to restore his name to the May 11 primary ballot. The court rejected Moore's motion to halt enforcement of Tuesday's decision ordering the governor's name off the ballot. The governor already has filed notice of appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court and now is expected to go to the nation's highest court in renewing his motion to keep his name on the ballot pending appeal. Moore had filed as a GOP candidate for an unprecedented third term as governor, but was ruled off the ballot due to the two-term restriction written in the West Virginia Constitution.

• Rep. W.S. Stuckey, Jr., D-Ga., announced Friday he will retire at the end of his current term rather than seek a sixth term from his south central Georgia district. Stuckey, 40, said he wanted to become "a fulltime husband and father and businessman. Several years back, I promised myself that if the time ever came when I could not devote my full energies to Congress and the people of the Eighth District, I would step aside. Now that time has come."

• U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim warned Friday that any new outbreak of all-out fighting in Lebanon could lead to partition of the country and foreign intervention. Waldheim said he hopes that a new Lebanese president will be elected "because this will open the door to a political settlement of the problem. But if the fighting continues it will be very serious and I cannot exclude a partition of the country and foreign intervention," he told a news conference.

Schools

Arlington Hts. Dist. 25

"A Night at the Palace" is the title of this year's variety show presented by students, faculty and parents of Ridge School. Today's performance will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the school gymnasium, 800 N. Fernandez. Tickets are $1.50.

The Jupiter space walk will be featured at Ivy Hill School fun fair from 11 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. today at the school, 2211 N. Burke, Arlington Heights. The fair also will feature a used book sale, grab bag, games and food will be served.

Contests

"How I Look at the Past 200 Years" is the topic of Mount Prospect Rotary Club essay and poem contest. The contest is open to all students in Grades 4 to 12, except children of Rotary Club members.

Prizes will be awarded in three classifications, high school students, 7th and 8th grade students, and students in 4th, 5th and 6th grades. First prize in each classification will be $75 U.S. Savings Bond, second prize, a $50 bond; third prize, $25 bond.

Contest rules call for essays or poems to be typewritten on one side of paper no larger than 8 by 11 inches, nor smaller than 6 by 9 inches, in less than 250 words. Entries will be judged on neatness, correct grammar, clarity, content, legibility and innovation.

The following information must appear in the upper right hand corner of each essay or poem: name of student, grade, name of school, student's address. All entries should be mailed to the Mount Prospect Rotary Club, Box 292, Mount Prospect, Ill., 60056 and postmarked no later than April 28. Entries become the property of the Rotary Club.

Winners will be notified during the last week of June.

The National Federation of Independent Business is offering $7,000 in scholarships and other prizes to winners in a Bicentennial essay contest.

The contest, open to high school and college students, will be written on the theme, "The Future of Capitalism: The Market Economy vs. the Planned Economy in America's Third Century." Deadline for submitting entries is June 15.

Entry forms are available by writing to: Intercollegiate Studies Institute, 14 S. Bryn Mawr Ave., Bryn Mawr, Pa., 19010.

In general . . .

The Catholic School Board Nominating Committee, Archdiocese of Chicago, is seeking applications for five openings on the school board. The openings are for full three-year terms.

The committee will review applications for the replacement of one Archdiocesan priest, one religious sister, and three lay people, including one lay woman.

Applications can be obtained from Patricia Petelle, Archdiocesan School Office, 721 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, telephone 527-3200. Applications must be returned by April 23.

MASTER OF THE NIGHTMARE, Rudolph Karba. A former high wire performer with European circuses, Karba's the man who runs the thrills of the spookhouse ride at the carnival at the North Point Shopping Center in Arlington Heights through the weekend.

Carnival spookhouse:

Chills and thrills—what they like

by JOE SWICKARD

The muscular man with a gold tooth and dressed in worn jeans emerged from the black tunnel of the Nightmare and smiled. The sun bounced off his gold tooth.

"People like to be scared," said Rudolph Karba, the man behind the Nightmare spookhouse, part of Mid-West Amusement's carnival appearing at the North Point Shopping Center in Arlington Heights through this weekend.

Despite his sinister entrance into the light or the gruesome backdrop, Karba leaned easily against the guard rails around the cars that would carry passengers into the Nightmare.

THE CUSTOMERS would be drawn by the ghastly mural of the Nightmare. The central figure is a dagger-gripping ghoul. Bats, rats and spitting roaches of enormous size were arranged around tombstones and gallow scenes.

"We give the people whatever they like. Skeletons, sudden lights — things like that," Karba said, with a trace of European accent.

"No, I haven't always done this — just about 10 years or so. I used to be in the circus. But then I was hurt," he said.

"I was on the high wire. I got hurt," he said. "That was in Europe. I was born and raised with the circus."

Now, Karba is the man who makes sure the people get their money's worth when the cars enter the black tunnel and weird shrieks and sirens fill the darkness.

"WE TRY TO GIVE the people whatever they like. And people want to be scared and have a good time," he said.

The Nightmare is a brand new spookhouse, fresh from the spookhouse factory in Florida. And while the basic concepts of the ride remain the same, there are refined chills so that even if one toured the same spookhouse the year before, there would be something new lurking around the corner.

"We used to have string, you know, that would hang down and brush the people," he said, wiggling his fingers in a demonstration.

"And we had hands that reach out and brush them. But the insurance companies made us stop. A woman was sitting so that the hand reached out and — well touched her chest. Now we keep everything pretty far back from them. It's all electrical motor driven now. It's the momentum that carries it," Karba said.

"EVERYBODY COMES to the spookhouse — young and old. Everybody comes," he said.

But some come more reluctantly than others.

"Some parents bring their little kids and the kids are crying. The parents tell them if they're scared here, they'll be scared in life. They come out OK, though," he said.

As Karba spoke, workmen were clambering through the steel network of the Sky Diver ferris wheel. The Tilt-A-Whirl, Dodge 'Em Cars, and merry-go-round were staked out and covered with canvas.

The covers would come off later in the afternoon. Several boys on bicycles glided through the carnival grounds on a preopening reconnaissance ride.

The Nightmare got the closest inspection. They intently studied the mural. Rats and bats and ghouls, they noted and exchanged a few words before slowly pedling off.

They glanced back. They would return with the night.

"Some get more scared than others," Karba said. "You can't please them all."

In three subject areas

Dist. 25 summer school fees set

Tuition will be charged for summer school classes in Arlington Heights Dist. 25 for the first time in four years.

The Dist. 25 Board of Education approved a summer school program Thursday in three subject areas.

Remedial classes in reading, math and language, will meet 90 minutes per day, five days per week. Class size is limited to 12 students and tuition is $40 per course.

Learning disabilities classes, limited to students in the district's learning disabilities program, will meet three hours per day, five days a week with class size limited to 10 students. Tuition is $75.

ENRICHMENT classes in subject areas including science, art, math and social studies will also be offered for three hours per day, five days per week. Tuition is $75.

Summer school classes will be held June 15 through July 16 with no classes scheduled July 2 or July 5. Classes taught by Dist. 25 staff will be held at South, Miner, Thomas and Rand Junior High Schools and at nearby elementary schools if there is sufficient enrollment. Transportation will be provided by parents.

Parents will receive a brochure explaining the program this spring and registration for summer school will be held by mail through May 15. Parents who have questions regarding summer school may call the district office or the principal of their local school.

Since 1972 Dist. 25 has provided a tuition-free summer school financed through funds from the state but those funds may no longer be available. The board decided to charge tuition for summer school this year in an amount making the program self supporting.

Supt. Donald Strong said it is uncertain whether the state will finance summer school this year because the state is having difficulty coming up with enough money to fund even the regular school program. The state's education budget must still be approved by the legislature and the Governor.

MORE THAN $100,000 was spent on summer school in the district last year and the district cannot afford to assume that cost, said Strong. The board has already trimmed the district budget to offset a deficit and the board was forced to choose an "alternative that does not involve financial risk for the district," he said.

In Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 summer school may not be offered this year. The board there had considered changing the free summer school program to a tuition-paid program charging $34 per class, meeting 90 minutes each day.

In Des Plaines Dist. 62 the summer school tuition will be $20 per course meeting 90 minutes daily. The district will still have to pay about $6,000 out of its own funds to finance the program.

Unit system called money saver

Taxpayers in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 would have to pay less tax in a unit school system than under the current dual district system to maintain programs during the next five years, consultants said Thursday.

Chet Knight of the Illinois School Consultants, hired by Dist. 59 to provide information on forming a unit school district, told the unit district study committee school taxes would need to be increased about 47 cents per $100 assessed valuation in a unit district during the next five years to prevent a deficit budget.

To maintain current programs under the dual district system, Dist. 59 91 cents per $100 assessed valuation taxpayers would need to pay about more than they are paying now in school taxes.

BY HAVING Dist. 59 formed into a unit district, the homeowner with a house assessed at $10,000 would save about $220 during the next five years, according to the consultant's figures.

Figures presented also showed the proposed unit district would have a deficit of about $11.8 million at the end of five years, compared to a combind deficit of about $29.4 million for Dist. 59 and the Dist. 59 share of High School Dist. 214's deficit during the next five years.

The committee plans to decide whether it will seek a referendum to form the proposed unit district Monday at 7:30 p.m. The location has not been set.

Soviet encyclopedia gift

The Arlington Heights Memorial Library will be one of 60 libraries nationally to receive the 30-volume set of The Great Soviet Encyclopedia in English.

The donation of the encyclopedia was made by radio station WWMM-FM and the Macmillan Educational Corp. of New York.

The library already has received the first nine volumes and the index. Five additional volumes will be published and delivered annually until the set is complete.

Man 'forgets' $1,600 police can't find it

Arlington Heights police are investigating the theft of $1,600 from a Teamsters' Union official's room at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel last week.

Police said Richard Fitzsimmons, president of Detroit Local 299 of the Teamsters and Warehouseman's Union, reported the loss after he returned to Detroit from contract negotiations at the hotel.

Fitzsimmons told police he had rolled the money up in a robber band and had hidden it beneath some advertising brochures on a dresser top. He said he forgot about it and boarded a Detroit flight.

When he reached Detroit he telephoned Arlington Heights police after being unable to find the money. No money was found during a subsequent search of the room.

Support sought for Walker tax collection plan

Gov. Daniel Walker's budget director has begun efforts to garner support for the governor's controversial accelerated tax collection plan.

Leonard D. Schaeffer, director of the Bureau of the Budget, started the campaign with a letter to Regional Transportation Authority Chairman Milton Pikarsky. Schaeffer told Pikarsky the new plan would give the RTA $3.5 million more in the next fiscal year.

The accelerated tax collection plan is a key facet of Walker's fiscal 1977 budget. The plan calls for a speed-up in the collection of sales tax revenues from large retailers and state income tax withheld by large employers around the state.

THE PROPOSAL requires approval from the Illinois General Assembly before it can be enacted. The plan will not actually give the state or other government units which receive state funds more money. It merely pushes ahead the collection of some revenues.

Schaeffer was not available for comment on the letter Thursday. An aide said he did not know how many other government officials Schaeffer expected to contact.

Some legislative leaders and State Comptroller George Lindberg have been critical of the proposal.

In a letter to Pikarsky, Schaeffer said the RTA will receive $122.5 million from the state in the next fiscal year.

"If the proposed legislation becomes effective in July, as it will be proposed, the additional $3.5 million should be available to the authority no later than October," Schaeffer said.

Schaeffer also called on Pikarsky to support the passage of the legislation to approve the bill.

Crane, Mikva agree on issue of vote funds

From the Roll Call Report

Here is how members of the Illinois delegation in the U.S. House and U.S. Senate voted on major issues during the final week in March.

U.S. House

CAMPAIGN FINANCE: The House rejected 269-134 an amendment to allow the Federal Election Commission to continue issuing advisory opinions on campaign finance practices without facing congressional review. The vote upheld a new requirement which mandates congressional review of both advisory opinions and formal FEC regulations.

Supporters said the amendment is destructive to the independence of the commission. Opponents of the amendment argued the oversight was necessary to ensure the commission complied with the intent of the Congress.

YES: Hyde, McClory, Erlenborn, Anderson, O'Brien, Michel, Railsback, Findley and Simon.

NO: Crane, Mikva, Metcalfe, Murphy, Russo, Derwinski, Fary, Collins, Rostenkowski, Yates, Annunzio, Hall, Shipley and Price.

DISCLOSURE: The House adopted 293-111 an amenlment to continue the requirement that copies of congressional campaign finance reports be filed in state capitals.

Since 1971, Congressmen and their opponents are required to file campaign finance-disclosure statements with both the congress and local secretary of state.

YES: Mikva, Metcalfe, Russo, Yates, McClory, Erlenborn, Anderson, O'Brien, Michel, Railsback, Findley, Madigan and Simon.

NO: Crane, Derwinski, Fary, Hyde, Collins, Rostenkowski, Annunzio, Hall, Shipley and Price.

SCIENCE TEACHING: The House rejected 232-160 an amendment to eliminate funds for a controversial National Science Foundation curriculum program and instead earmark funds for teacher training.

At issue was $1.4 million designated for a controversial Human Sciences Program, which is billed as an NSF effort to upgrade textbooks and teaching aids for elementary and secondary life-science courses.

Supporters of the unsuccessful move to cut the funds argued the program was "fraught with extraordinary psychological danger to the children."

Opponents of the fund cut said local school officials could reject the NSF program if they so desired.

YES: Crane, Russo, Derwinski, Hyde, McClory, O'Brien, Michel, Findley and Madigan.

NO: Mikva, Metcalfe, Murphy, Fary, Collins Rostenkowski, Yates, Annunzio, Hall, Anderson, Railsback, Price and Simon.

U.S. Senate

CONCORDE: The Senate defeated 50-31 an amendment to prohibit the Concorde supersonic jet from landing in the United States. Ford administration officials have approved a 16-month trial period to allow the controversial plane to land in Washington and New York. The Senate effort was a move to overrule the administration decision.

Both U.S. Sen. Charles Percy and U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson voted against the amendment.

NO FAULT: The Senate approved 49-45 a motion to send back to committee a bill to require states to establish a no-fault insurance plan. The move effectively kills the legislation for this year.

Supporters of the move to kill the bill question the need for federal action on no-fault insurance.

Both Percy and Stevenson voted no.

Mr. and Mrs. James McElhaney

Linda McCarthy—James McElhaney

Newlyweds Linda Lee and James Robert McElhaney greeted 50 guests at a reception in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore H. McCarthy of Buffalo Grove, following the young couple's mid-afternoon ceremony March 20 in the Church of Jesus Christ Latter Day Saints, Arlington Heights.

Linda and Jim, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry McElhaney of Schaumburg, are making their home in Northbrook where the bride works for Allstate Insurance Co. The groom is a teacher in Maine Township Dist. 54.

Linda graduated from Knox College and Jim from Northern Illinois University.

THEIR WEDDING attendants were Gail Westeberg of Champaign, Linda's college roommate, as matron of honor and William Reyna, Schaumburg, as best man.

John Ratzel, Boston, and Ted McCarty Jr., the bride's brother, seated the wedding guests.

Linda chose a white satin gown overlaid with lace on the bodice, and complementing it was a fingertip lace mantilla veil. White daisies made up her bouquet.

Her honor attendant wore pale pink print and carried soft pink daisies.

Weddings

Elizabeth Hume—Lt. Ken Glueck

A candlelight ceremony March 20 in the First Presbyterian Church of Peotone, Ill., united Elizabeth Hume of Peotone and Lt. Kenneth Glueck, Palatine, an officer in the U. S. Marine Corps.

The couple met at MacMurray College in Jacksonville, Ill., where the bride earned a degree in elementary education and the groom a degree in physical education. He is now stationed at Whiting Field in Milton, Fla., where he and his bride are now living.

Ken is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Glueck and is a graduate of Palatine High School. The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Norman of Peotone.

A WHITE SILK jersey gown with lace trim studded in seed pearls was the bride's choice for her early evening wedding. She wore a matching headpiece with two-tiered veil and carried a bouquet of white roses and gardenias.

Mrs. Dain Meyer of St. Louis was matron of honor, with Retta Bryant, Watseka, and the bride's sister, Mrs. Tom Welch, Dwight, as bridesmaids. They wore royal blue jersey with matching jackets and carried bouquets of white and blue pompons.

The groom chose his cousin, Ron Kraft of Lake Zurich, as best man and as groomsmen Jeff Glueck, his brother, and John Wator, Chicago Ridge. The guests were seated by Bob Mayo, Chicago, Tom Millar, Libertyville, and Al Garber, Dayton, Ohio. Also in the ceremony were the bride's twin nephews, Greg and Mike Welch, Dwight, as ring bearers.

A reception followed at Sully's in Kankakee.

Lt. and Mrs. Kenneth Glueck

Peggy Spratlin—Joel Kuykendall

Peggy Spratlin and Joel Kuykendall, newlyweds of March 6, first met when they were 16. Both graduated from Arlington High in June '72, and Joel went on to graduate from Harper College in '74. He is now employed by Palatine Post Office as a mailman and Peggy by Armstrong Industries, Northbrook, as a bookkeeper.

Daughter of Maurice Spratlin, Arlington Heights, and Eleanor Spratlin, Salt Lake City, Utah, Peggy and Joel, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kuykendall, Arlington Heights, were married in Barrington United Methodist Church.

THE DOUBLE RING, candlelight service was held at 2 p.m. with a reception for 100 following in the clubhouse of Arrowhead Village Apartments in Palatine where the newlyweds are making their home.

Peggy chose Nancy Lisinkski, Palatine, as matron of honor, and her sisters, Nancy Nelson, Chicago, and Kelly Spratlin, Arlington Heights, as bridesmaids along with Debi Gustafson, Palatine.

Mr. and Mrs. Joel Kuykendall

Richard Lisinski, Palatine, was best man, and ushers were the bride's brother-in-law, Greg Nelson, Chicago, and the couple's brothers, Scott Kuykendall, Arlington Heights, and Rick Kraus, DeKalb.

Peggy and Joel honeymooned at Lake Geneva.

Karen Marie Shinn—Terry Wales

Mrs. Terry A. Wales

Terry Alan Wales, son of Mrs. Mary S. Wales, Schaumburg, and the late Lt. Col. Perry W. Wales, and his bride are residing in Morgantown, W. Va., where Terry is working toward a master's degree in industrial engineering and employed as a graduate assistant at West Virginia University.

Both Terry and his bride, the former Karen Masie Shinn, are graduates of West Virginia University where Karen received her master's in public administration last year.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Shinn, Charleston, W. Va., Karen and Terry were married Feb. 28 in Aldersgate United Methodist Church, Pocatalico, W. Va. For the 1 p.m. candlelight, double ring service Karen chose her sister, Cheryl, as maid of honor, and Kathy B. Pike, Charleston, and Ellen K. Wales, cousin of the groom from Royal Oak, Mich., as bridesmaids.

DONNA MARIE HOBBS, 10, Sissonville, W. Va., was flower girl, and the groom's 5-year-old cousin, David Paul Wales, Morgantown, was ring bearer. Terry's cousin, Steven R. Shadley, Lafayette, Ohio, was best man, and ushers were his cousin, Paul J. Wales, Royal Oak, and the bride's brother, Richard D. Shinn, Morgantown.

A reception for 110 guests was held in the church after which the newlyweds left for a honeymoon in the Virgin Islands.

Blue jeans status sign in Russia

Blue jeans in the West are a symbol of the restless, carefree young — the great levelers that make all men and women sartorially equal.

But in the Soviet Union a pair of blue "dzhinsy" is often prized as a status symbol by the few — and unavailable to the many. For years, it signaled someone, if not Western in outlook, at least having access to the forbidden fruits of capitalism.

Jeans and long hair used to be regularly assaulted in the press as being representative of capitalist decadence, but the ideological objections are fading.

The Soviet Union even makes its own jeans nowadays, although in insufficient quantity to satisfy demand.

BUT JEANS are slowly becoming more generally available, thanks to imports from East European countries and India.

Buyers prefer the imports because Soviet jeans look too much like jeans were originally supposed to look — like functional work pants. Two-tone, bell-bottomed Polish jeans are much more popular. An Indian brand called "vaquero," which has a made-in-America look, is very popular but hard to find.

The real thing from the United States still has definite snob value. A pair of authentic brass-riveted, leather-labeled denims from America is so sought after that people will pay up to 50 rubles ($65) on the black market for a San Francisco label rather than 12 rubles ($15.60) for a Bulgarian substitute in the Tsum Tsum department store.

GENUINE LEVIS seem to be de figueur among the sons and daughters of the ruling, military and police elite, whose fathers can travel abroad or have access to Western goods through special stores closed to the public. Jewish dissidents who get parcels from abroad also tend to sport them.

The West's tattered, frayed and patched jeans are seen here less frequently. Since dzhinsy are more expensive and hard to get, they tend to be worn more as an article of fashion than of protest.

Jeans suits are particularly prized, and are as likely to be the smartly pressed garb of a middle executive or scientist as the uniform of the wealthier college generation.

DZHINSY ARE still a phenomenon

Each to own taste in collectibles

Collecting
with Grace Carolyn

Perusing the antiques publications can be most interesting, especially when coming upon a collection which seems most unusual or "what on earth would he want to collect that for?" But each to his own taste, according to the old saying.

I recently read of a London collector who is very fond of chocolate. Now, I can understand that, being a chocolate nut myself, but he turned his taste for the confection into a hobby of collecting wrappers, and at last count, has some 25,000 different covers. The wrappers represent 1,214 brands made in 85 countries. He claims that he has "tasted" them all. The article didn't say how much he weighs.

Germany tops the list with different designs on its chocolate wrappers, but he even has souvenirs from Iraq, Tunisia and Mongolia. Holland and Switzerland, of course, contribute a great deal of chocolate and so have many brands.

ANOTHER COLLECTIBLE which is connected with the edible is Cracker Jack toys and premiums. This famous confection is now more than 180 years old, having been started in 1872 by Frederick W. Rueckheim. It seems that Rueckheim's brother Louis found in that year a way to separate molasses covered popcorn kernels and gave one to a salesman who exclaimed "It's a Cracker Jack," and the name was born. In 1908 the Cracker Jack company had composed the famous song "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" and incorporated a lot of free advertising with the line "buy me some peanuts and Cracker Jack."

Beginning in 1910 the boxes were sold with a coupon redeemable for prizes, and in 1912 the prizes were packed inside. There were some 175 baseball cards, for which an album could be ordered for 10 cents. There were also 20 post card sized riddle cards, a series of postcards and coins of U. S. Presidents.

ANOTHER FAVORITE was a cartoon "standup" which was an oval tin picture featuring a character such as Little Orphan Annie, Harold Teen, Skeezix or Herby, and 10 different "standups" are known. I saw one of these the other day in a local shop for $2, but didn't realize it was a Cracker Jack toy until I read the article.

I remember toys such as small tops, rings, watches, whistles, policeman's badges and little puzzles or games, which were popular in the '30s. During World War II Cracker Jack inserted such items as miniature artillery and tanks, and an era came to an end in 1948 when the toys were no longer made of metal, but of plastic. I haven't bought a box of Cracker Jack for some time, so I don't know what is being given today, but I do

Joann Carol Toljanic's engagement to Jim Tackes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Tackes of Arlington Heights, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Petramale, also of Arlington Heights. A summer wedding is planned by the couple.

Both Joann and Jim are students at Northern Illinois University where Jim majors in marketing and Joann in sociology.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Reader benefits from bulk in diet

I, too, have benefited from the whole wheat, fruit and cereal diet. I use some bran every day, either Bran Flakes or All-Bran. The one thing I don't understand is that I began to lose weight as soon as I started this diet. It certainly straightened out all of my bowel problems. I went from 125 to 110 pounds. I am a 72 year old female and am 5 feet 5 inches. I have had a physical checkup (no blood count this time) and everything was okay. My blood pressure was 140 over 80 which pleased my doctor. He also didn't seem to be alarmed about my weight loss but I am concerned so I thought you might give me an idea as to whether a blood count might help.

I feel great otherwise except my fingernails peel off and my hair has thinned so that I am about to get a wig. I do hope you can enlighten me as what to do next.

I am pleased to hear that your bowel problem has been corrected. A large number of people who have had chronic constipation and spastic colon problems benefit by increasing bulk in their diet. Others who want his information can send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 2-1, Spastic and Irritable Colon and Constipation. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Your main problem now is weight loss. There is only one way that a person loses weight and that is by taking in fewer calories than their body uses. Something has happened to increase your calorie use or else you are eating less. I would guess that the latter may be the case. This is often a side benefit of an increase in bulk in the diet. If you have cut down on sugars and sweets that you may have been using in the past and converted to more bulky foods you may be satisfied with foods that provide less calories.

I would like to point out that many people who lose a modest amount of weight will have a significant decrease in their blood pressure. This is true even in people who previously had normal blood pressure. The decrease in the level of blood pressure is good because it decreases the risk of heart and vascular disease. No wonder your doctor is pleased.

There are many other reasons for weight loss besides a change in the diet. These include diabetes, cancer, tuberculosis and an overactive thyroid. It requires a fairly extensive medical examinaton to trackdown the real cause of unexplained weight loss not related to a decrease in calorie intake.

Don't blame your fingernails and loss of hair on your change in eating habits. Many other people who have gone on this diet have no such responses. The truth is as one gets older there are changes which occur. Until we understand more about aging they just have to be expected. Regardless of what you have done about your diet you had probably started to develop increased thinning of hair and you may also have had changes in your nails.

Be sure to get an adequate amount of good protein (milk and meat) in your diet. Both hair and fingernails come from protein. Many women tell me that after they stopped using fingernail polish their fingernails were perfectly normal. From the dietary point of view, getting adequate protein plus adequate calcium from milk products is about the most that can be accomplished.

There's no such drink as caffeine-free cola

Dear Dorothy: Do me a favor and write about the sugar-free colas not containing caffeine. Every time I have trouble sleeping and go wandering around the house, or keep the light on to read, my mother blames it on the colas. If she reads it in your column, she'll stop blaming it on the colas. "Sign me Nagged Silly."

You can't win, Silly. Your mother happens to be 100 per cent right. Where did you get the cockeyed notion that sugar-free meant caffeine-free? Could you be confused because of the coffees which are decaffeinated? Anyway, caffeine is a natural constituent of tea, coffee, chocolate and the related drinks. The colas are caffein-based. All that's been changed is a sweetener other than sugar.

Dear Dorothy: A friend says that if I put a tiny bit of bone meal in the soil in which I transplant house plants, they will do better. Is this correct? — Mrs. T. G. Nance

Maybe. A little bone meal might help and certainly would do no harm. The important thing in house plants is to use sterilized soil (if you're getting it out of your garden) and to add peat moss and any one of the following: Perlite, vermiculite or sand. Increases the porosity of the soil.

Dear Dorothy: When a recipe calls for "bouquet garni" using a piece of cheesecloth, I just use my aluminum, screw-on top, tea ball. The holes not only make the liquid go through easily, but it's a snap to get out with the chain. And since we rarely have a ham and do like pea soup, I now use smoked pork hock. To give the soup the flavor it would get from the clove-decorated ham, I just put several cloves in the tea ball. — Mrs. B. Wood

Dear Dorothy: We have moved to an area that isn't serviced by city water so we use bottled spring water for drinking, cooking and so on. There was no problem until I tried making iced tea. The results have been an opaque, muddy-looking brew that is most unappetizing. Would you or a reader be able to help? — Betty J. Kelley

It stymies me. Maybe some readers have had this experience and know what to do about it.

Dear Dorothy: I tried heat, cold, wedges, torque and so on to remove a jammed glass stopper in an expensive perfume bottle. After all else failed, I wrapped the neck of the stopper between the top of the bottle and the top of the stopper with several turns of dental floss, tied a slip knot in the ends and pulled. The cork came out with ease. Have someone hold the bottle (or hold it with your knees) to prevent spilling after the top is wedged out. — Robert Hawkins

Tri-Delt day helps others

"Delta's Designer Day to Help Others Speak" is Thursday, April 29, at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare for alumnae of Delta Delta Delta and their guests.

The title refers to the Chicago Area Alumnae Council's benefit luncheon and fashion show to support the sorority's philanthropy, the Cleft Lip and Palate Institute of Northwestern University.

The event will feature a cocktail hour, then luncheon in the Rosemont Room of the hotel and a parade of ensembles by Saks Fifth Avenue.

THE CHICAGO Area Council began functioning 25 years ago after uniting Tri-Deltas in Chicago and suburbs.

In July of 1953 the Cleft Lip and Palate Institute was selected as its special service project. At Northwestern treatment is extended to children and adults from all over the country who have been born with palate and lip defects. The Institute uses the Council's contributions to buy needed equipment, to further research and to help patients defray part of the cost of dental care, plastic surgery and speech therapy.

Through the years the Council has donated more than $65,000 to the Institute and its needs.

GENERAL CHAIRMAN of the luncheon-show benefit is Mrs. Vincent C. Castle of Palatine, immediate past president of the Council and a member of Northwest Suburban Alumnae chapter. Other area members on the committee are Mrs. Donald Anderson, Arlington Heights, decorations; Mrs. George Busse, Mount Prospect, programs; and Mrs. James M. Forrester, Buffalo Grove, program design.

Officers of the Northwest Suburban group include Mrs. Steve Kaye, Arlington Heights, president; Mrs. Donald Anderson, vice president; Mrs. Dennis Shortal, secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Donald Rouse, Schaumburg, Council delegate.

Luncheon tickets are $10.50, available from all Tri-Delts or by calling Mrs. Castle at 358-7716 or Mrs. Rouse, 882-0365.

CUP OF TEA refreshes Northwest suburban alumnae of Delta Delta Delta, Mrs. Vincent Castle, Mrs. Donald Rouse and Mrs. Steve Kaye, who are helping plan an April 29 luncheon fashion show sponsored by Chicago Area Council. Mrs. Castle is benefit chairman.

of the big cities, where stores are better stocked than in the provinces.

Outside the major population centers, people must take what's available. The uniform for provincial Russians still seems to be black serge suits and plastic sandals for men and print dresses for women.

The fad of super-tight jeans may never catch on here, if only because Russians usually prefer comfort to fashion.

And though fashion barriers are coming down, there is still some residual official wariness about jeans and other western modes.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda last year warned its readers that bourgeois propaganda "under the slogan of 'modern style' tries to instill ways which are morally hostile to our socialist way of life." Jeans? It could have been.

BUT AT the same time it said old people should not try to impose their habits "with regard to the fashion and appearance of our youth."

It told young people, on the other hand, not to impoverish themselves "by reducing all the problems of life to the question of your own appearance."

As an indication of the developing freedom in fashion, the young Communists newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda recently published letters from readers complaining about the shortages of fashionable clothing — and above all, jeans.

But the way the consumer goods industry works here, it could take years before supply catches up with demand, by which time jeans may be out of fashion anyway.

ONE YOUNG lady wrote to Komsomolskaya Pravda that "after seeing foreign films, we often discuss how people dress and come to the conclusion that we will never get clothes like that."

As fashionable clothes do become more generally available, one demeaning aspect of Soviet life appears to be on the wane — the practice of trying to buy clothes off the backs of tourists.

To anyone receiving an offer they can't refuse for their jeans — or anything else — the best word of advice is "don't." Soviet sources say secret police still make black market offers as a way of framing foreigners.

remember the excitement of eating your way to the bottom to discover the prize.

NOT SO UNUSUAL, but a collectible I have often been asked about is National Geographic Magazine. It seems almost everyone has a stack of these in the attic and wonders what they are worth. Since the magazine started in 1888, accumulating an entire set would be quite a feat, although some collectors have done it. Many of the issues before 1906 are extremely difficult to find, although reprints are available from the National Geographic Society so that one can assemble a "complete set."

The greatest rarity is the four original issues of Volume One of The Geographic, consisting of four separate issues dated October 1888-October 1889. These are a sort of brick red color, and some 750 copies were printed.

ADVANCED GEOGRAPHIC collectors look for rare miniatures which were issued from 1915-1920 and other oddities relating to the organization and magazine.

Writing in The Antique Trader Annual of Articles, 1975, Edwin C. Buxbaum advises collectors who are really interested to try to assemble as complete a set as possible, then look for the other items, such as advertising brochures, article reprints, membership certificates, etc. He has recently started a Geographic Collectors' Association and welcomes questions about the association or any specific subject related to the hobby. Address him Edwin C. Buxbaum, Box 465, Wilmington, Del., 19899. Remember to enclose stamped envelope.

Stocks drop 8.81 in 3rd straight loss

NEW YORK (UPI) — Flareups in Lebanon unsettled investors and drove prices slightly lower along a broad front Friday for the third consecutive day. Trading was moderate on the New York Stock Exchange, which finished its worst week in four months.

The Dow Jones industrial average, just about even around 1 p.m., fell 8.81 points to 968.28, bringing its three-day loss to 33.37 points, including 9.13 Thursday. For the week, the blue-chip average fell 23.30 points in the worst setback since it fell 41.87 points the week ended Dec. 5, 1975.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index dropped 0.93 to 100.35, the NYSE common stock index skidded 0.56 to 53.41 and the average price of an NYSE common share decreased by 35 cents.

Declines routed advances, 1,153 to 341, among the 1,855 issues crossing the tape. Volume totaled 19,050,000 shares, compared with 20,860,000 traded Thursday.

Fears Syria and Israel would engage in a major Middle East war, resulting in another oil embargo, apparently triggered afternoon selling. Prices had rallied slightly around noon, when dispatches reported Syrian troops had entered fighting in Lebanon.

Leahy presses for override of day-care veto

Illinois congressmen and U.S. House leaders have been urged to override President Gerald R. Ford's veto of day-care center legislation which stripped $13 million from Illinois.

Mary Lee Leahy, director of the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services, sent telegrams to Illinois congressmen telling them 35,000 Illinois children will be affected by the President's veto.

The legislation could allocate funds to help day-care centers throughout Illinois and other states meet federal, state and local standards and give states an additional five months to meet new government standards.

Mrs. Leahy said if Congress does not veto the funds, many working mothers who now place their children in government subsidized child care centers may be forced to go on welfare because without the funds the centers would be forced to close.

"Many day-care centers cannot afford to meet the federal standards without government aid, and may be forced to close," she added.

Congressional leaders plan to schedule an attempt to override the veto next week.

3 rail unions hit RTA on service purchase pact

An attorney representing three railroad unions has challenged the legality of the Regional Transportation Authority's recent purchase of service agreement with the Milwaukee Road.

Although no lawsuit presently is threatened, Washington attorney William G. Mahoney said in a letter that the RTA was legally required to negotiate with the unions before signing the Milwaukee Road pact.

RTA and Milwaukee Road officials, however, maintain that the law only requires the RTA to "negotiate or arrange for the negotiation" of employe arrangements.

"OUR POSITION IS that the clause is subject to interpretation," said Tom Phillips of the Milwaukee Road, noting that arrangements have been made for negotiations. "We see no violation."

The Milwaukee Road is the only railroad to reach agreement with the RTA for takeover of its commuter services. A preliminary agreement has been reached with the Illinois Gulf Central R.R., but final terms have not been approved.

In his letter, Mahoney noted the tentative agreement with the Illinois Gulf Central and continuing negotiations with the Chicago and North Western Ry. and the Burlington Northern R.R.

"It would seem clear that the RTA stands in violation of the provisions of . . . the act," Mahoney said in his letter to the Milwaukee Road. "In that event, of course, its purchase agreements are void."

Campaign 'debate' irks Hesburgh

by DAVID E. ANDERSON

Catholic Father Theodore Hesburgh, president of the University of Notre Dame, is no stranger to the world of Washington or the nature of political campaigns.

In Washington, he served as chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, was a member of President Ford's ill-fated Presidential Clemency Board and has been active in the corridors of power in pushing the growing concern among churches over U.S. food policy.

Hesburgh also serves as chairman of the board of the nonprofit Overseas Development Council, and he took the opportunity of the council's release of its annual study, "The U.S. and World Development: Agenda for Action, 1976," to reflect on the current election campaign, especially what is being called the "foreign policy debate" within the campaign.

He isn't particularly happy about it.

"I THINK I SHOULD take this opportunity to note that I am particularly disturbed by the lack of signifi- 'Foreign Polisy' debate now extant in our country," he told a group of reporters.

He called it "shocking" that "the principal foreign policy issue in our Bicentennial year elections is how tough we talk to the Russians.

"Have any of the candidates for

World of religion

President of the United States directed serious attention to the present bargaining for a new international economic order?" he wondered.

"The 'revolution of rising expectations' demands an adequate response from America if we are to avoid increased global turmoil, instability, and insecurity for ourselves and our children for decades to come."

HESBURGH THOUGHT the fault was with both the candidates and news media.

"This is the year that we shall choose the persons who lead us into the 'Third Century' of our national life," he said. "Partially by our own initiative, but also, finally, in response to a decades-old outcry for a new deal for the world, this is also the year in which we can decisively shape the quality of global life and justice for decades ahead.

"But have you heard about that in the political debates? Either the candidates are virtually silent on these global issues so vital to our future, or the press is not reporting what little they are saying — and I suspect both to be the case," he said.

"Informed, concerned citizens are not yet exerting sufficient pressures about these issues to make it 'good politics' for our own politicians to provide the leadership necessary to meet these challenges."

Hesburgh said that because of U.S. initiatives — an announced intention to stop bickering — in the confrontation between the developing and developed worlds, 1976 "presents the world with an opportunity for striking new international bargains and beginning new global cooperative efforts.

"To sacrifice this occasion could prove to be folly for all governments involved . . . and tragedy for their people," Hesburgh said.

RTA's Pikarsky should resign

The Regional Transportation Authority's suburban board members have played their last high card in the continuing battle with Milton Pikarsky over the future of mass transportation.

This week, the suburban representatives called for the resignation of Pikarsky, a knowledgeable man in the area of mass transit whose vision ends at the Chicago city limits.

This amounts to a new hand in the continuing bluff poker game that has been played for more than two years. The four suburban representatives are numerically outmanned on most RTA issues, except on where six votes are needed for approval.

We have had serious reservations about Pikarsky's RTA performance from the start. We now believe Pikarsky has to be replaced if an effective and realistic transportation plan for all residents of the six-county RTA area is ever to be developed.

The crucial point now is whether the suburban board members have the courage to stick to their decision not to approve the RTA budget unless Pikarsky resigns. One of those four suburban votes is needed to approve the budget.

Although the decision to withhold votes on the budget represents a radical step, the time has come for such an action.

Unless the suburban members stick to their guns, another opportunity to force some sort of meaningful planning for the suburbs will slip away. Those opportunities will be less frequent in the future.

Stick to your guns:

• Daniel Baldino, you're the man who buckled under pressure to vote to hire Pikarsky in the first place;

• Richard Newland, you're the man who voted for the last budget after allegedly extracting from Pikarsky a promise to help ease the Chicago and North Western Ry.'s financial problems;

• Jerry Boose, you're the man who thought he had Pikarsky's promise to give suburban bus systems 100 per cent deficit funding;

• Gene Leonard, you're the new suburban man on the RTA board who has not yet given in to promises that won't come true.

Nothing short of a total commitment to solidarity is acceptable in this effort. If one of you buckles, any future efforts to cause meaningful change will amount to little more than little boys crying "wolf" at the big city bad guys.

Only time will tell if the last high card in suburban members' hands is an ace or, regrettably, another joker.

Shut up! You've been divisive and obstinate and you've rejected compromise!

Bardwell applauds board

The editorial criticizing the fiscal policies of School Dist. 59 and blaming these policies on the incumbent board members was inaccurate.

District 59 has reduced staff over the past years as enrollment has declined. This form of cutback has not been delayed so that staff cuts would all occur in one year. Staff reductions have been more significant than our neighboring school systems over a period of years.

The board of education in Dist. 59 has an enviable record of holding inflation to under 9 per cent. A major cause of inflation in school budgets is increased salaries. If Dist. 59 had experienced an inflation rate of 12 per cent, common in school systems over the past year, the district would have had to reduce staff by another 20 positions.

Dist. 59 assigns teachers and specialists to each school on a ratio basis so that each school gets an equal share of human resources. The present ratio is one professional for each 21 children. Depending on how much specialization is provided in each school, the number of pupils in individual classes could vary from 25 to 30 pupils. To use class size as a comparison between schools in one district or between school districts is an inaccurate way to compare expenditures.

The present board of education in Dist. 59 has taken responsible and forthright action to place Dist. 59 in a sound financial position. No other district in our area has lost nearly $3,000,000 in state aid over the past three years because of changes in the state aid formula. Most of the Northwest suburban schools have had an increase in state aid these past three years. This fact has necessitated a major overhaul in providing the dollars necessary to maintain at least an average level of education in Dist. 59. The present board has met this challenge.

Board members criticized

As the husband of a Dist. 54 teacher who has been active in the teachers' association, I have had it up to here with the outrageous venom coming from board candidates Edward Bedard and Gordon Thoren. They have continually hurled the accusation that last year's strike was "planned" in advance with "malicious intent" by a cabal of "militant unionists." I know for a fact that these accusations are completely, absolutely, utterly false.

My wife was on the negotiating team and I saw the whole thing unfold from a very close range. The teachers' negotiating team started off in January — that's right, January — with very high hopes that the board would recognize the damage which inflation had done to the salary schedule.

Such hopes proved to be very naive. The teachers waited and waited and waited — ten months, to be exact — and when the board majority persisted in what looked like arbitrary and unreasonable behavior, disillusionment set in. Whether it is true or not, many teachers felt that the board majority, including Messrs. Bedard and Thoren, were more interested in destroying the teachers' association than in reaching an amicable agreement.

The refusal of the board majority to permit mediation was the final straw which brought on the strike. There was never any "pre-planned" intent, and the decision to strike on the part of these "militant unionists" was mixed with many other, conflicting feelings. It could not possibly have been further from "malicious."

Messrs. Bedard and Thoren appear to be determined to escalate a full-scale war in this district. That I find appalling enough, since there have been very few wars in which anyone wins. But it is especially infuriating to me when their ammunition in this war is fabrications which affect the reputations of people I care about — people who I know for a fact tried as hard as possible in that whole mess to behave responsibly.

'End paramedic survey by April 15'

The Buffalo Grove Paramedic Survey must be completed by April 15 in order to determine if we can enter the next fiscal year which begins May 1.

Inquiries have been made regarding the "seal" campaign. This campaign, which was to have begun last August, was delayed due to the fire department's move to new quarters, and monies received were for last year's budget.

The statement that the budget was to cover salaries for 19 paramedics was in error and should have read expenses for 19 paramedics, such as schooling, books, etc. The paramedics receive no salary.

The question to be answered is, can we afford to enter another fiscal year. Some individuals are of the opinion that their individual insurance which covers ambulance transportation will suffice.

Personal insurance coverage that pays for ambulance transportation does not guaranteee that the service will be available. The subscription plan would guarantee the availability of the service. If 65 per cent of our service area does not subscribe, the possibility of discontinuing paramedic service exists.

Fire Dept. personnel will be on hand at the fire station on Saturday from 9 a.m. until nooon to answer questions and to accept completed questionnaires. Any family who has not received their questionnaire can get one at the station on Saturday morning or Monday-Friday from 8:30-5:00.

As of Thursday morning 450 replies have been received.

He accepts our Oakton rejection

I would agree with the Des Plaines Herald's editorial rejecting Thomas Flynn for reelection as trustee of Oakton Community College. Their rationale is correct and I should know because I am Thomas Flynn, trustee at Oakton.

I was narrow-minded when I cast the fourth and eventually decisive vote in executive session for the Des Plaines permanent site of Oakton. I was disruptive last year when I publicly spoke out in favor of overriding the Governor's veto of increased aid to all levels of education in Illinois. It was narrow-minded of me to support an Oakton program for handicapped children and an auto mechanics program for students from Des Plaines, Morton Grove and Niles. I did appeal to a special interest group when I cast the only vote against raising the Oakton real estate tax, the students' tuition and parking fees. I was selfish when I only missed one public board meeting in three years and did not submit one single expense account item to Oakton in my three years on the board. Yes, I am an ax-grinder who has been disruptive and even narrow minded. Yes, I will continue to act in the future as I have in the past three years.

I'm sorry to be disruptive again so soon, but I must if I am to justify my opening sentence. I ask you to vote on April 10 between noon and 7:30 p.m. If not for me, then please consider Janet Juckett, John Prochaska, and Mr. Harris from Lincolnwood, as well as The Herald's choices. It seems The Herald forgot to mention all the candidates. Thank you.

Thomas W. Flynn
Trustee, Oakton.

Candidate's experience 'valuable'

While reading your endorsement of candidates for the Dist. 25 School Board, I felt a need to call attention to the candidacy of James Foster.

I know that Jim's interest spans several years and that he has personally attended many board meetings to keep himself abreast of the school board's action. He has no conflict of interest as Mr. Chidley clearly does since Mrs. Chidley teaches in Dist. 25.

Jim has a positive and an outgoing personality which makes him readily accessible to the residents. In addition, his background in personnel, budget and finance will be invaluable to the board as it deals with its financial problems.

Computer vote won't help her

by DOROTHY MEYER

Did you see the news item this week about the county maybe going to computer voting in November? I don't think I'm going to like that. Not being compatible with machines of any kind, I am not likely to wake up Nov. 2 and suddenly find myself a whiz with computers.

My track record with machines, voting and computers has caused Murphy to dedicate his law to me — "if anything can go wrong, it will" has been the rule whenever I get near anything mechanical.

The first time I used a voting machine, the lever to operate the curtain worked fine when I went into the booth, but it jammed when I wanted to get out.

After awhile I got panicky, but when I decided to crawl out from under the curtain an election judge cried, "Stop! That's against the law!" I cried right back, "Let me out! You can't keep me a prisoner here forever!"

Judge said, "Calm down, lady, you are probaby not using the lever correctly," and I said, "It only works two ways — from left to right and from right to left, right?" and he said, "Right. Or left, depending upon whether you want in or out. Now try it again, but GENTLY this time."

But neither gently nor otherwise would budge that lever.

Next, the judge had a conference with the other judges and they studied their rule book as though they were memorizing it. Then they read me my rights like I was being arrested for robbing a bank and, with everyone in the world as witnesses that my vote was not being diddled, the judge stuck his arm into the booth and began groping for the lever.

"I feel the knob," he announced for all the world to hear, and I muttered, "Let go of my knee, you fool."

He finally located the proper knob, and the curtain slid open as easy as you please.

You can see why I'm not looking forward to computer voting. As I understand it, it's going to be with punch cards and my vote will be recorded by little holes in the card.

With Murphy's law as my guiding light, the computer will go berserk and I'll be up to my arches in confetti.

Or it won't work at all, and that election judge with the hands will have to grope around in my booth again.

Although I had planned a summer vacation this year, I think I will go away in November instead and then I can vote with an absentee ballot.

That's not mechanical, is it, Murphy?

Norm's day: today

On April 10 the voters in Dist. 15 have an opportunity to elect an acknowledged community leader to the Dist. 15 Board.

Norm Knapp, as past president and chairman of the board of the Palatine Jaycees and a member of the Dist. 15 Steering Committee, is the kind of strong, proven leader that Dist. 15 will need to see it through troubled fiscal times.

Today is a crucial day if we are to continue to provide quality education to our children in the district.

April 10 is the day for Norm Knapp.

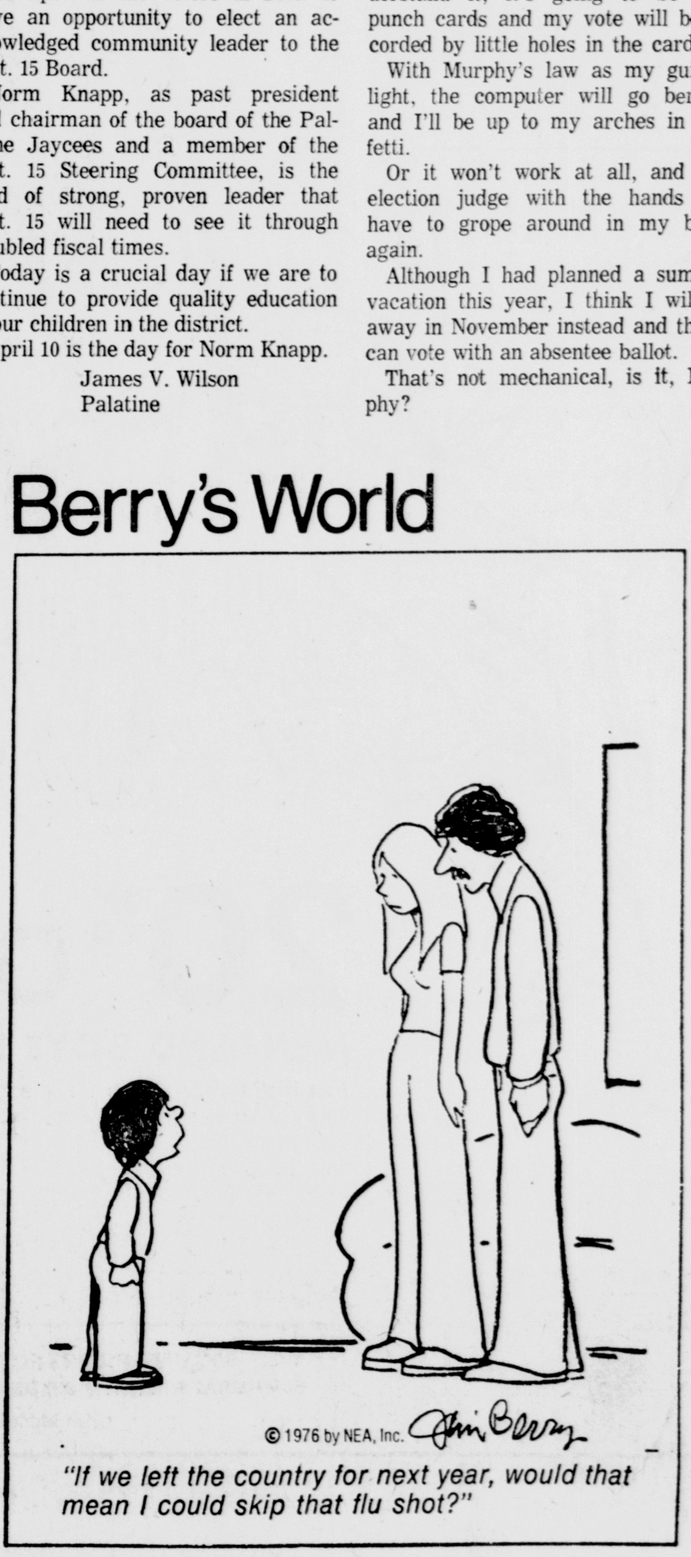
Berry's World



"If we left the country for next year, would that mean I could skip that flu shot?"

Vote today for school boards!

Dist. 54 board called unbelievable

The school board of Dist. 54 is unbelievable! For two years I served on committees and attended many board meetings, therefore I believe I know a few ways which we can save money.

We have many consultants — most of whom are paid over $20,000. I'm not sure, but I believe the consultants consult the consultants.

The money we spend on landscaping is unreal. We spent $25,000 to landscape Eisenhower school. What about the rest of the schools? How long does the landscaping last beofre it is destroyed?

Our board hired a kingergarten consultant at $22,000 a year. Why? The man hired had never even taught kindergarten.

There are many other small ways to cut expenses that together will add up to a sizable sum.

One of the cuts the board made was to cut the lunch program. Two years ago a survey was made throughout the district. Over 90 per cent of the people said they wanted a lunch program. Yet this is one of the first items cut. The people never said they wanted to hire more administrators, pay for mileage for the administrators, or many other items.

If the lunch program is cut, then I insist that no children be allowed to eat at school. In the past it has been policy that the taxpayers pay for supervisors for district employees children at lunch time. Their children are no different than any others.

The average class size is supposedly 25.4. To increase this by one child per classroom we allegedly can save $650,000. So do we need to build so many new schools? Our children can be educated in a class with 27 or 28 children.

The only cuts the board has made so far are ones that affect the children — elimination of some gym classes, art and music programs, lunch program, etc.

I urge the people of Dist. 54 to call your board members and make your feelings known.

His choice for Dist. 25

Statistics have shown that less than 7 per cent of those eligible to vote in school board elections actually exercise this right. This rather innocuous-sounding statement has much to say to those of us who still cling to the belief that we are living in a society of individual rights and self-determination preserved and perpetuated through the institution of self-government.

In the words of G. K. Chesterton: "I do not believe in a fate that falls on men however they act; but I do believe in a fate that falls on them unless they act."

Your newspaper is to be commended for the series of articles illuminating the various candidates for public office in the forthcoming school board elections. You cannot make the people act; but by informing them of their choices you at least afford them the opportunity to act intelligently.

There is one point, however, where I believe you were remiss in your duty to the people. In your editorial of endorsement you failed to add the name of James Foster running in Dist. 25. You did, however, praise his qualifications highly and hoped he would continue to "maintain his interest and run again." This, in reality, was endorsement without actually saying it. I believe you should have spelled it out. A man of Jim Foster's qualities, character and dedication deserved as much.

They query paramedic priorities

We as residents and taxpayers in Buffalo Grove, for the past nine years want to lodge a complaint that most people will probably question. Our concern relates to priorities.

Today we received an open letter from Chief Wayne L. Winters, that contained a questionnaire asking whether we were, or were not, interested in subscribing to "get assured paramedic service" which provides "Mobile Intensive Care Units." We object to the lack of objectivity in Chief Winter's questionnaire because it omitted the most logical choice of all. The questionnaire should have asked if we were willing to have ourselves taxed in order that we may be assured of a permanent, fully trained service that would be available to any and all persons in Buffalo Grove.

We object to this service being offered on a subscription base only. Some people will not be able to afford it; others will. If this service were provided on a tax basis then all persons and activities would be supporting this service.

Some of Buffalo Grove's neighboring communities have had tragedies because the appropriate fire department and paramedic unit could not figure which department had jurisdiction, or to which service the individual did, or did not subscribe.

Chief Winter's letter leaves unsaid what happens to paramedic service to businesses, factories, schools and shopping centers in the area. All of these questions would be moot if this service were tax supported instead of subscription.

We are not for indiscriminate tax increases. However, we are for proper priorities in taxation to provide needed basic services. We view governmental services such as police, fire and paramedics as "must services," and not as frivolous frills. The Buffalo Grove Fire Department should give the resident taxpayers the opportunity to speak in this matter.

We realize that it is not reasonable to expect taxing priorities to be changed overnight. We do, however, want adequately supported police, fire and paramedic service even if this necessitates a tax increase. The "village fathers" could and should reconsider priorities so that basic services receive their just support through taxation. Such services have much higher priority that buffalo herds, statues and TV program participation.

We are not criticizing the service of the Buffalo Grove Fire Department and our paramedics. What we want is an adequately tax supported operation that will make a good service into a great service, that is available to all within the community of Buffalo Grove.

'Proud' of Dist. 21 board

I am an involved, concerned parent of Dist. 21. I didn't become involved and concerned last month or last year. I have been an involved, concerned parent in this district longer than anyone currently attending school board meetings. I can make that statement because when the population of this community was 600, I knew most everyone of them. I have been attending school board meetings long before most people ever thought of living in this area.

I have not always agreed with this district, but we have always been able to respect each others opinions and decisions and work together for quality education. I have been a part of the many growing pains and expansion of this district. I have supported and worked for every tax referendum to meet the increase in enrollment. I have supported and worked, not only on individual school levels, but the district as a whole. We have shared concerns.

Those of you on the present board and administration have always proved to be level-headed, conscientious about finances and concerned for the entire district. In spite of the present situation — cutbacks, termination of staff, pressure groups and even name-calling — you have maintained your professionalism in education and kept a cool head, thinking of the community and not conceding to the demands of a few.

I am especially proud of you all, and commend you on the example you are setting for the future concerned parents of Dist. 21.

Mrs. James K. Weider

He supports an incumbent

Your endorsement of candidates Shirley Munson and Stephen Carponelli for the Harper College Board of Trustees was noted with interest. Your failure to endorse candidate Jessalyn Nicklas is regretable. Your contention "that Mrs. Nicklas has become unable to objectively view the college's problems because of her close alliance with the college administration" is completely contrary to the facts witnessed by me during my attendance at the board of trustees meetings. One of the prime concerns of Mrs. Nicklas is to see that the taxpayers' money is used wisely. This is verified by her statement concerning the second campus.

Mrs. Nicklas is not out to make a name for herself as you pointed out in your candidate endorsement article. Her interest is, and always has been, to offer the best in education, cooperation with the school administration, awareness of the students requirements and a businesslike approach where board and money matters are concerned.

Your candidate endorsement article stated, "There is no question that Mrs. Nicklas has served with distinction, both as a trustee and as one of the leaders in the steering committee that formed the college," therefore it is my opinion that we the taxpayers should continue to use her expertise — especially during the present economic conditions.

Backs a choice

I wholeheartedly support fellow board member Anne Evans in her bid for reelection to the Maine Township High School Dist. 207 Board of Education. I urge citizens to vote for Mrs. Evans on the basis of her school board experience, her leadership qualities, and her thorough knowledge of the public educational system.

I believe that, in the school board election coming up on Saturday, April 10, Anne Evans is a candidate who should be retained on the Dist. 207 Board.

During her two years on the board, Mrs. Evans has exhibited a clear understanding of the needs and thinking of young people and a great insight into the problems of the district. She is a level-headed person who has consistently demonstrated balanced judgment and common sense in her decision-making. She has proved herself to be a dedicated, conscientious, and responsible school board member, and I would like to see her fine services continue to be made available to the school system.

White Sox triumph, 4-0; Cubs fall

by BOB GALLAS

One game, does not a season make, but things got off on a note of optimism when the White Sox unveiled their 1976 act for the first time Friday.

Playing to the third largest opening day crowd in history, 40,318, the Sox scrapped their way to a 4-0 win over the Kansas City Royals.

Out against their old nemesis, Arlington Heights native Paul Splittorff who pitched for the Royals, the Sox broke a jinx and earned their first opening day win since 1972.

Splittorff, who had a lifetime mark against the Sox of 14 wins and two losses going into the contest, went to the showers with one out in the fifth when Sox newcomer Jim Spencer put one into the seats for a two-run homer that gave Chicago a 4-0 lead.

Sox pitcher Wilbur Wood kept the opposition off balance all afternoon with a tantalizing knuckleball. Wood walked two and struck out seven while scattering six hits, all singles.

Only two runners reached second base for the Royals as Wood seemed to get stronger as the game progressed, getting four of his strikeouts in the last three innings.

Spencer drove in three of the Sox runs, two with his homer and another in the third when he drew a walk with the bases loaded. Spencer had a perfect day, going 3-for-3 plus drawing a walk. He was also credited with a sacrifice when he bunted along a runner in the second inning.

The Sox, who will try to emphasize defense and speed this year, appropriately enough got their first run of the day without a hit.

Jorge Orta got on in the third when he was hit by a pitch, stole second, then eventually scored as Splittorff walked the next three batters.

Splittorff, an Arlington High School product, pitched his way out of two jams with minor damage.

In the third, he got the first two men out before getting into trouble, hitting Orta, then walking Cleon Jones, Buddy Bradford and Spencer before getting the third out with only one run scored.

In the fourth, Jack Brohamer and Pete Varney led off with singles for the Sox. Then Chet Lemon notched an RBI as he grounded out to the second baseman, scoring Brohamer.

Brohamer went 2-for-3 for the Sox with a pair of singles and Pete Varney, who subbed for ailing catcher Brian Downing, went 2-for-4 with two singles.

Orta, Bradford, and Bucky Dent all contributed singles to round out the 10-hit Sox attack, which was aided by four Kansas City errors.

AL roundup

Jim Palmer, voted the American League's Cy Young award winnter in 1975, was at his best Friday, displaying the style that has led many people to feel that he is the best pitcher in baseball.

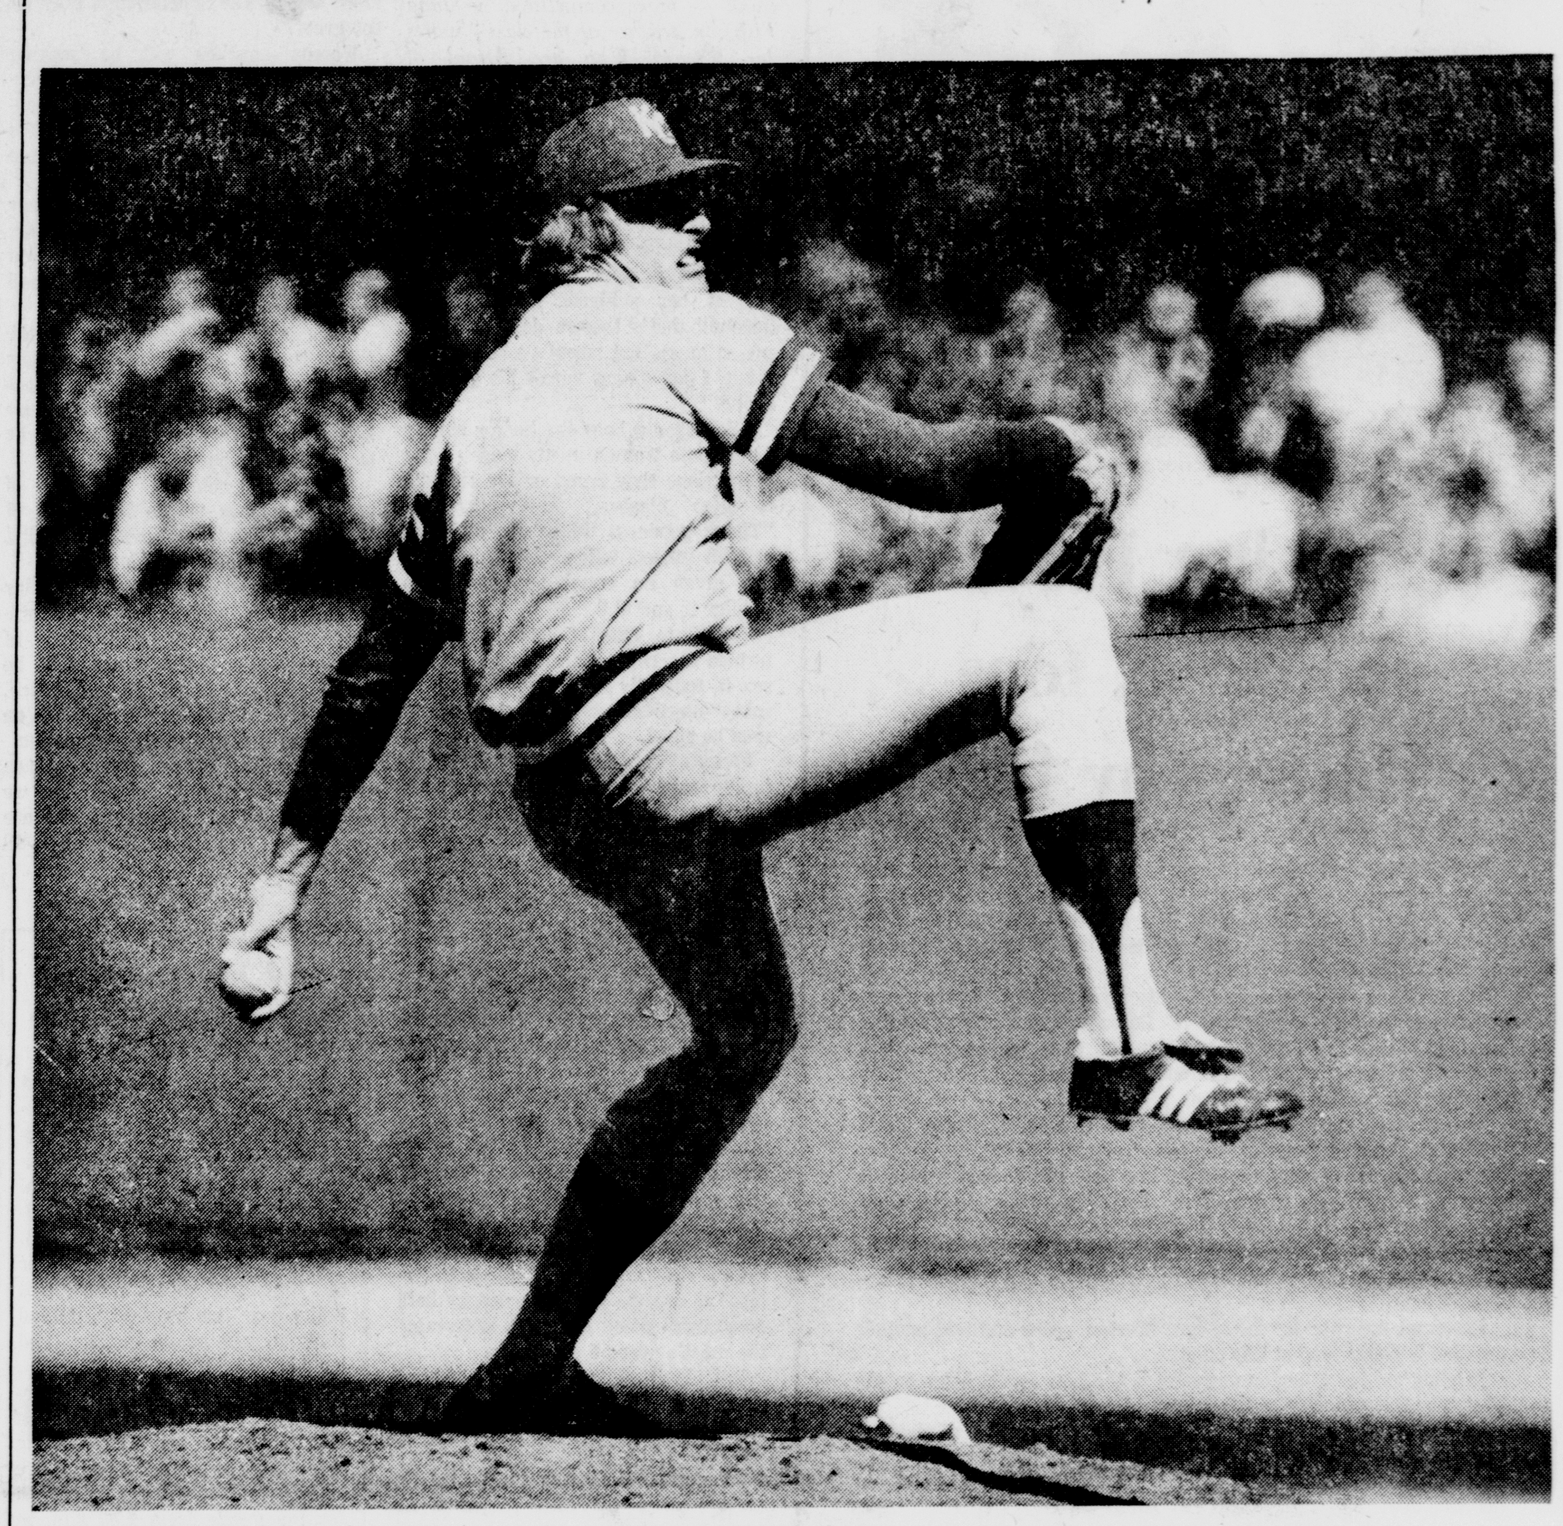
Palmer outdueled Ferguson Jenkins and, with ninth inning relief help from Dyar Miller, pitched the Baltimore Orioles to a 1-0 triumph over the defending AL champion Boston Red Sox in the opening game of the season for both teams.

It was Palmers' third straight opening day victory.

Jenkins, acquired in the off-season from Texas, allowed only three hits but was victimized by some shoddy defense. The 32-year-old righthander had complained about the Rangers' poor defense last season, but it was a pair of errors in the fourth inning that allowed the Orioles to score their only run.

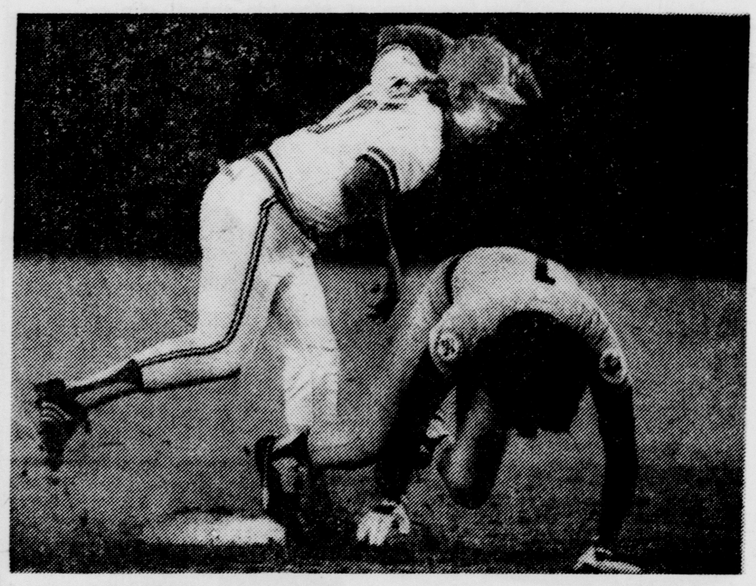
With one out in the fourth Lee May reached first on shortstop Rick Burleson's throwing error and raced to third on Bobby Grich's single. May scored when outfielder Fred Lynn's throw skipped past third baseman Rico Petrocelli for an error.

Toby Harrah's bases-loaded bloop single with two out in the 11th inning drove in the winning run and Gaylord Perry scattered seven hits to give the Texas Rangers a 2-1 win over the Minnesota Twins.



Arlington Heights product Paul Splittorff works in a losing cause for the Kansas City Royals.

McGlothen holds Chicago to six singles in debut



CHICAGO CUBS' Jose Cardenal gets tagged out by St. Louis Cardinals' Mike Tyson after he attempted to steal second base in second inning Friday night. St. Louis won, 5-0.

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Lou Brock, Ted Simmons, Reggie Smith and Hector Cruz each drove in one run Friday night to back the six-hit pitching of Lynn McGlothen and give the St. Louis Cardinals a 5-0 win over the Chicago Cubs in the season opener for both clubs.

Mike Tyson led off the St. Louis fifth with a triple to the rightfield corner and scored the winning run on Brock's high, bouncing infield hit. After Bee Bee Richards singled, Brock scored on Simmons' single.

McGlothen, who drew the opening-game assignment after Bob Gibson had pitched the Cardinals' opener for the past 11 years, scattered six singles and struck out two. Gibson retired at the end of last season.

Burris allowed 10 hits and two runs in six innings before being replaced by a pinchhitter. Buddy Schultz relieved, gave up Smith's run-scoring double in the seventh after Bake McBride singled and Simmons reached base on Thornton's throwing error. Simmons scored on a wild pitch by reliever Paul Reuschel and Smith came home on a single by Cruz.

NL roundup

John "The Count" Montefusco, with help from Gary Lavelle over the final 1 2-3 innings, pitched the San Francisco Giants to a 4-2 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers Friday at strike-bound Candlestick Park in the season's opener for both clubs.

Despite the presence of nearly 50 pickets on strike against the city of San Francisco, a crowd of 37,261 turned out for the opener and also saw Bobby Murcer and Gary Matthews hit homers for the Giants.

Dusty Baker, the Dodgers' big winter acquisition from Atlanta, hit a solo homer in his initial at-bat.

In another National League game, Bud Harrelson's two-run fourth inning double carried the New York Mets to a 3-2 victory over the Montreal Expos Friday and kept three-time Cy Young award winner Tom Seaver undefeated in nine consecutive opening day assignments.

Seaver, who won 22 games last year, scattered five hits, while striking out eight and allowing one run in seven innings. He has started every opening day since his second season and now has five victories and four no decisions.

Southpaw Randy Jones hurled a five-hitter and Johnny Grubb banged out four singles to drive in a pair of runs Friday night to spark the San Diego Padres to an 8-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

A crowd of 44,722 turned out for the Padres' home opener.

youngsters to the park. "You can always come to the park with Veeck around and know you're going to have a good time — one way or another," he said.

Friday's attendance bettered last year's top gate — 30,947 — by a wide margin.

Veeck maintained his highly visible style throughout the game, moving through the park on his peg leg, chatting with the fans while pausing to watch part of the game, or asking questions on what the fans would like to see.

THERE SEEMED to be something for everyone, including a marching band, jazz and Spanish music combos, clowns, and even Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, the city's No. 1 Sox fan, was on hand to throw out the first ball.

On the field, there was a host of new faces acquired in off-season trades. And there were a few, not-so-new faces, like Sox star of the 50s Minnie Minoso, now a club coach, who got two standing ovations and kept up a patter with fans in the stands.

Today

Nostalgia was everywhere on the part of the team, decked out in uniforms reminiscent of the 30s, and the fans, who brought out the "go-go" chant, a trademark of the '59 pennant winners to encourage a basestealer, the first time a Sox runner got on base.

Indeed, the go-go may be back with the White Sox, who in the tradition of 1959, racked up their first run of the season without the aid of a hit.

At McCuddy's, the popular bar across the street from the Sox park, fans who had shunned blankets for a more liquid warmth, gathered to toast a winner's toast.

"This was nice," a swaying fan said to his equally tottering friend. "We ought to come out and see the Cubs again."

RAY FLOYD coaxes his birdie putt on the 14th green Friday going 13-under-par and widening his second round lead in the Masters Golf Tournament. Floyd leads by five shots.

Red-hot Floyd shoots 66, tops Masters by five

Ray Floyd, seemingly unhampered by swirling winds that sent scores soaring into the 80's, shot a six-under-par 66 Friday, shattered one record and tied another, and opened a gaping, five-stroke lead on Jack Nicklaus after two rounds of the Masters golf tournament in Augusta, Ga.

His awesome showing — he has put only one "five" on the scoreboard over the first 36 holes and his 131 total is four lower than the previous Masters record at this point and 13 — under par — left Floyd's pursuers in the select field for this major championship shaking their heads in amazement.

"I certainly can't complain about 136," said Nicklaus who had a 69 Friday and whose own 36-hole total was only one shot higher than the previous tournament record for the first two rounds, which he shares. "I may be down by five shots, but that's a pretty low score."

"What can I do?" asked Hubert Green, who shot a 66 of his own and couldn't gain any ground on the leader. "I can't defense Raymond Floyd."

Floyd set a record for the 36-hole Masters score and tied another with his five-shot lead at this point.

In addition, his 13-under par total is the best for 36 holes on the PGA tour this year and so is his lead.

But no one was conceding anything to the reformed playboy, perhaps remembering that only one year ago Nicklaus led by five shots after 36 holes — and then had to come from behind to win on the final day.

Basketball players, track star taken in NFL draft

National Football League clubs, faced with a dearth of talent this year, crept through the final rounds of the annual college player draft Friday, dipping into the ranks of track and field and college basketball in search of quality athletes.

The 28 teams, which needed more than 14 hours to complete the first seven rounds on Thursday, continued to drag their feet in making choices Friday. Seattle opened the second day's drafting by taking Larry Shipp of Louisiana State, an NCAA hurdles champion, as a wide receiver and San Diego kept things interesting in the 12th round by taking Oregon basketball star Ron Lee as a defensive back.

Washington kept the basketball streak going by selecting Wayman Britt of Michigan on the 13th round and Quinn Buckner of Indiana on the 14th. Britt and Buckner were opponents in the NCAA basketball final won by Indiana. Britt was selected as a defensive backwide receiver while Buckner, who played football for Indiana as a freshman and sophomore, was taken as a defensive back.

The Chicago Bears completed their selections by taking Norm Andersen, a wide receiver from UCLA, on the 11th round; John O'Leary, running back from Nebraska, on the 12th; Dale Kakowski, running back from North Dakota, on the 13th; Ron Quie, running back from Oregon State, on the 14th; Jerry Meyers, defensive tackle from Northern Illinois, on the 15th; Ronald Parker, tight end from Texas Christian, on the 16th; and Mike Mahlam, linebacker from Arkansas State, on the 17th and final round.

Bulls fall in Portland

Portland's Trail Blazers pulled away in the final period Friday night and rolled to an impressive victory over the Chicago Bulls, 100-88. The Bulls' season mercifully ends Sunday afternoon in Milwaukee.

After the Bulls battled into a 65-65 deadlock after three periods, Portland turned on the power in the latter stages of the loosely-played game. Portland held a 49-40 lead at the intermission.

Mickey Johnson paced the Bulls with 23 points. Jack Marin tossed in 13. Larry Steele had 17 for Portland.

Chicago will take a 23-58 record into its season finale Sunday.

Fear is gone for girls in sports

(Last of a six part series on women in sports — past, present and future.)

by PAUL LOGAN

"Some of the people in the class believed their bodies were fragile and feared being knocked down or knocking others down. They found out that they're really tougher than they think — more competitive." —Jane Fishman, teacher of the class "Sports for Women Who are Afraid of Sports"

Someday Jane Fishman won't have to teach adult women how to catch a ball or throw it. But right now there's definitely a need for her six-week class at the Jane Addams Center of the Hull House Assn.

"I'm afraid of catching a baseball," one of her students admitted. "A baseball that's thrown doesn't bother me so much, but when it's coming off a bat, I don't know where it's going to strike."

"You should hear the horror stories from some women in my class — the restrictions they faced or the ridicule in gym classes," said Fishman. "Thank goodness things are different in high schools today. Boys and girls are given an equal opportunity to indulge in sports."

Thanks to Title IX (the law which forbids discrimination on the basis of sex in federally funded schools), high school physical education classes will soon be co-ed.

Forest View High School began a junior-senior selective program long before the law. "It's in its third year now," said Doral Rose, women's sports coordinator at the school. "Its an accepted thing now.

"Ted Wissen (men's P.E. resource teacher) and I thought that there had to be something better than what had been going on in the past (in P.E. classes). We felt our facilities were not being used to the fullest advantage."

Permission was granted for the experimental classes. Then students were asked for their ideas before the classes were set up. So far, bowling and volleyball have proved to be the favorite co-ed sports.

Forest View also is hosting the area's first track meet (Falcon Relays) to use the points earned by both boys' and girls' teams to determine the meet's over-all champion.

Bill Mohrmann, the boys' head coach, suggested the idea. He and Denise Van Huele, the girls' coach, have worked on it together.

Some people foresee male and female teams traveling together to games or meets — men vs. men and women vs. women — in order to cut down on expenses. The Big Ten Conference might be doing that in the near future.

"We will treat women's 'non-revenue' sports just like the men's," said Charles Henry, assistant to the commissioner. "Sell them so they come close as possible to breaking even."

The biggest revenue sport for girls in Iowa is basketball. Instead of a preliminary game involving underclass boys, the girls play a varsity game to be followed by the boys. Some see this doubleheader concept catching on in Illinois.

In the near future, the philosophy of participation in many sports may give way to specialization. Although some coaches want to see their athletes receive the broadest background possible, the lure of scholarships may be too great.

Women coaches will be seeking even greater equality in the next decade. Such controversial topics as longer seasons and more say in the state's decision-making process will be high on the list.

For their athletes, the future is very bright. More pro sports are available. Softball will start this year. As you might expect, one of the softball founders was Billie Jean King.

More leaders like King are on the way. They're out there right now bouncing basketballs, running races and practicing putts.But these future spokeswomen won't necessarily be leaders in the sports world.

Kathryn Clarenbach, professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin, best summed up what sports participation can do:

"Women who have had the regular experience of performing before others, of learning to win and to lose, of cooperating in team efforts, will be far less fearful of running for office, better able to take public positions on issues in the face of public opposition.

"By working toward some balance in the realm of physical activity, we may indeed begin to achieve a more wholesome, democratic balance in all phases of our life."

CO-ED VOLLEYBALL is just one of the mixed P.E. sports underway at Forest View, a high school that's ahead of its time.

Paul Splittorff on WM 'Sports Page'

Arlington High School product Paul Splittorff, who started Friday's season opener for the Kansas City Royals against the Chicago White Sox, will be a special guest this morning on WWMM-FM's "Sports Page" show at 9:05.

Splittorff will be the guest for the first hour of the show, and White Sox Vice President Roland Hemond will be on for the final hour at 92.7 FM.

"Sports Page" is a Saturday morning sports talk show with Bob Houghton and Bruce Blair serving as co-hosts. Listeners are invited to call in with questions for the guests from 9:05 a.m. to 11:00 a.m.

Two wins, tie for area teams

Mike Marshall teamed up on the hill and at the plate to pace Buffalo Grove to a 12-2 romp past hosting Barrington Friday, one of two area teams to post victories.

The same duo had combined earlier in the season to throttle Libertyville. Starter Marshall struck out eight in four innings and provided the key blow in an eight-run second inning rally for the Bison.

After Pat Fiddick and Mike Ledna had walked and Al Cymbal had beat out in infield hit to load the bases, Marshall deposited a grand-slam homer 350 feet over the right center field fence.

Prokof whiffed a pair during his two innings of relief work. He also stepped to the plate in the sixth after Marshall and Phil Czosnyka had singled and deposited another 350-foot circuit shot, this time over the fence in left.

Buffalo Grove is now 2-1 in non-conference play.

EARHART PACES WARRIORS

Rob Earhart survived a shakey mound start and added some offensive firepower of his own later on while leading Maine West past Wheaton-Warrenville 5-3, on the Wolverine diamond.

The hosts struck for three quick runs but were shut out by Earhart the rest of the way while the Warriors scrapped back. Matt Serna's double after Rick Sandry had reached on an error put Maine on the scoreboard in the third and in the fifth Glen Watson knotted things up at 3-3 by following Tim Platek's single with a 400-foot circuit blast over the fence in left center.

In the seventh Platek and Watson walked and Doug Unzicker reached on a fielder's choice to load the sacks.

Cards' badminton team wins Mid-Suburban title

SMASHING the shuttlecock is Arlington's Jody Lyon, who won her third singles match at the Mid-Suburban badminton meet Friday. She beat Rolling Meadows' Darlene Ewald, 11-3, 11-0.

As expected, Arlington's powerful badminton team clinched the Mid-Suburban League championship Friday at Elk Grove High School.

Coach Mary Lou Hundt's Arlington Cardinals went into the first of a two-day tournament with a huge lead over second-place Hoffman Estates. After two rounds of action, all the Arlington players had reached the semifinals.

In today's semifinals action, beginning at 1 p.m., the first singles matchups will be Arlington's Leslie Grabitz vs. Schaumburg's Laurie Minarcik and Rolling Meadows' Libby Iturralde vs. Palatine's Barb Pingel.

Second singles looks like this — Schaumburg's Berna Hoehn vs. Hoffman Estates' Mary Beth Leonard and Palatine's Mary Munson vs. Arlington's Mary Flynn.

In third singles, here are the matchups — Palatine's Jody Vastine vs. Schaumburg's Cynthia Carley and Hoffman Estates' Karen O'Malley vs. Arlington's Jody Lyon.

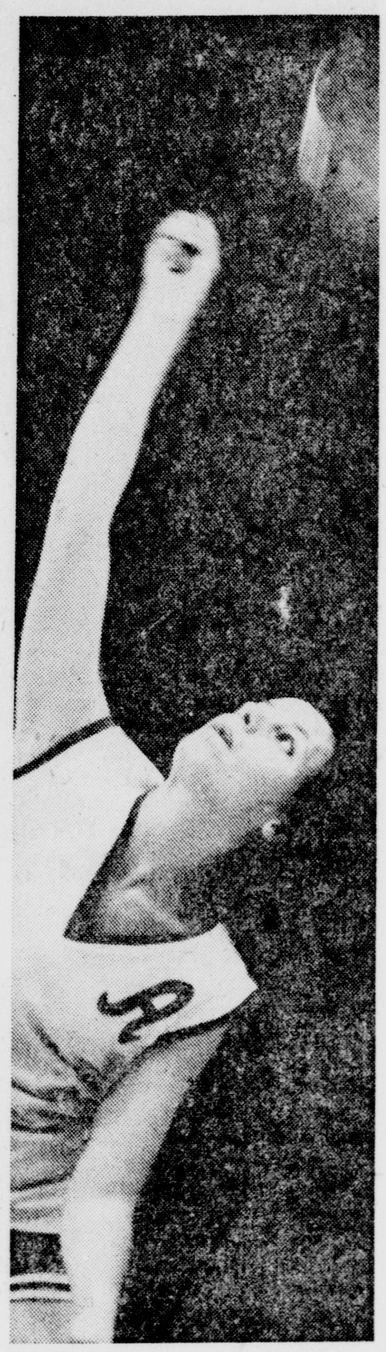
Here are the semifinal doubles pairings:

First — Hoffman Estates' Sue Hill-Sandra Norton vs. Hersey's Sue Vetta-Kathy Tchon and Conant's Diane Hillman-Pam Fischlein vs. Arlington's Jan Haberkorn-Kathie Golden.

Second — Arlington's Lori Schroeder-Kris Rickey vs. Elk Grove's Susan Gans-Cathy Coffman and Buffalo Grove's Laura Riforgiato-Diane Sola vs. Hoffman Estate's Mary Hill-Terry McGlennon.

Third — Arlington's Lisa Pugsley-Cathy Condon vs. Rolling Meadows' Dawn Wiebe-Terri Wandersee and Elk Grove's Michele Fiebernitz-Peggy Gilmore vs. Forest View's Sue Cavanaugh-Alison Mason.

Fourth — Schaumburg's Cathi Anderson-Mary O'Brien vs. Hersey's Jean Vetta-Nancy Borre and Rolling Meadows' Donna Prelac-Darlene Petrucci vs. Arlington's Karen Wickless-Karen Zobel.



STEADY SENIOR Mary Flynn has never lost a match in the Mid-Suburban League. The Arlington second singles player shows why in the opening round of the badminton championships with 11-0 wins over Fremd's Janet Ray.

PIRATES, MAINENO RTH TIE

Jeff Williams took part in three scoring rallys to prevent a strong pitching performance by Kevin McKenna and Mark Menke from winding up in the losing column Friday as Palatine tied Maine North 3-3.

McKenna and Menke each hurled half of the eight inning contest, combining for nine strikeouts and just one walk while allowing only four hits.

The Norsemen took an early 3-0 lead off starter McKenna but Williams started turning things around in the fourth with the first of his three base hits. An error and a passed ball advanced him to third and after Bill Mottashed walked Williams raced in on a delayed double steal.

In the fifth Mike Constantino and Williams singled, Dan McSweeney walked and an infield out by Paul Henkel pushed the second Pirate run across. In the seventh with two away walks to Al Knotek and Constantino set the stage for a single by Williams to send the game into overtime.

Palatine's non-league record is now 1-0-1.

Winnetka parking permit riles Tower Rd. smelters

Lake Michigan fishermen dipped for more than tasty little smelt Tuesday night at the Tower Rd. access piers in Winnetka.

Anglers who arrived on the scene between 3-11 p.m. were greeted at the gates to the entrance of the hot-water discharge plant by a Winnetka Park District supervisor who announced a charge of $2 to park near the two piers.

"Tuesday was the first night we started charging non-residents to park," Winnetka Park District Supt. Ken Wesenberg said.

"We plan to keep charging the $2 parking permit fee until the end of the smelt run. We, of course, won't charge anyone walking into the park."

Wesenberg blamed a growing number of property users over the last 4-5 years, the resulting increase in debris and instances of vandalism on the grounds for the emergence of the permit parking fee.

Smelters were adamant about the new fee, some vowing not to return.

"This (smelt fishing) was one of the few things you could still enjoy for free, but now everything cost something," one disgruntled angler said.

"First it was a fishing license, then a trout and salmon stamp and now they have you digging just to park.

"It's getting out of hand. You used to be able to park right up on the piers, but they cut that out two years ago. And now you're only allowed one net per fisherman."

Once thoughts changed to the business of fishing, the smelters were rewarded with a good harvest of the silver spawning migrants.

Relatively calm wind conditions early in the evening produced nets of 30-50 smelt every 15-20 minutes, depending on the location and the mesh size.

A pair of chest-wading fishermen seining the beach area were very successful in their efforts, although one of the high-steppers admitted he wished he was wearing a wet suit to insulate him from the cold Lake Michigan water.

Those employing a 5/8 inch mesh net were recovering larger smelt while the ½ inch mesh netters were satisfied with the 5-7 inch smelt that needn't be boned to be eaten.

One angler was showing off a "lunker" smelt that had to weigh one pound. "This is filleting size," he chuckled.

After squeezing the trapped smelt through the net mesh, most of the anglers used a scissors to snip the heads off and gut the smelt before tossing them into a pail of water.

Cleaning the smelt on the spot helped pass the time between lifting the nets and keeping warm. A stiff northwest breeze began numbing hands and fingers about 1 a.m. and the fencerow of Coleman lanterns disappeared steadily.

Whitecaps accompanied the constantly shifting winds and battered nets along the breakwater. At 1:30 a.m. Herald potographer Mike Seeling and I raised only eight smelt from one net that had been undulating for 20 minutes.

It was time to pack up.

The two piers, targets of enthusiastic landgrabbers only hours earlier, were now inhabited by scattered smelt heads and the occasional "quack" of a mallard duck.

The peak of the smelt run is yet to come and when it does, you can bet fishermen will be packed like sardines along the silver mines of Lake Michigan . . . parking fees or not.

Hints for tantalizing walleyes with leeches

In walleye fishing circles, "Lindy Rigging" means plain hook / slip sinker fishing. It's the surest method for presenting leeches, the hot live bait phenomenon that has everybody talkin' in walleye country. Here are some worthwhile tips for frishing with leeches on Lindy Rigs:

Make sure you have "ribbon" leeches, not the soft mud leech or blood sucker. Bait dealers trap the kind you need from non-fish lakes and sloughs. Chances are the leeches you find near your dock will fail to tempt walleyes.

Choose the large or "jumbo" leeches but be prepared to try the smaller ones, especially when fish are finnicky. Sometimes it pays to trail several small leeches from a single hook.

Hook a leech through the sucker end, impaling it only once.

Troll or drift slowly. This allows the leech to swim with a natural, undulating action. Going too fast causes the leech to spin or to pull straight through the water.

Periodically check the leech to make sure it's trailing properly. Once in a while a writhing leech will "ball up" in a hopeless tangle with hook and leader.

With leeches, use your Lindy Rig methods of feeding line to a biting fish, as you would with minnows or night crawlers. At the first sign of a bite, release line toward the biting fish.

With large leeches, or when fish seem cautious, allow plenty of time before setting the hook. With smaller leeches, or if the fish strikes hard, simply lower your rod tip toward the fish and set the hook.

Never hesitate to re-use a fresh-looking leech after catching a fish. Leeches are more resiliant and tear less easily than night crawlers.

Store leeches in cold water. Feeding them is unnecessary.

River action improves in Wisconsin

It's hard to beat spring fishing for walleyes and action in Wisconsin rivers is starting to boil.

Fishing success below the Petenwell Dam on the Wisconsin River near Necedah for walleyes has been excellent during the past week and good in the city of Wisconsin Rapids.

Ice is off most of the lakes in the Eau Claire area and walleyes are biting in the Chippewa River. Walleye fishing on the Mississippi River is not exceptionally good because of the high, turbid waters in the Black River Falls area.

Smaller male walleyes are being taken on the Black River, downstream from the Black River Falls dam. Walleye fishing is only rated as fair below the locks and dams on the Mississippi in the LaCrosse area.

The good-eating gamefish is hitting well below the Red Wing Dam on the Mississippi and below the Lake Menomin Dam on the Red Cedar River in Dunn County.

Closer to home, fishermen are catching a few walleyes off the Winneconne bridge on the Fox River. Walleyes are also hitting at Orihula on the Wolf River and on the Fox River in the city of Oshkosh in Winnebago County.

Walleye fishing on the Wolf River in Waupaca County should improve shortly. The fish are in the marshes which will make fishing slow for a couple of days.

After they spawn, fishing should be good to excellent, provided the high waters begin to recede.

Michigan's record deer

Michigan's record whitetail deer was shot near Trout Creek in 1919 by Albert Tippett of Flint. The Department of Natural Resources says Tippett's deer dressed out at 354 pounds and was estimated at 425 pounds live weight.

No sleep for steelhead anglers

Vic Watia

My watch said it was 2:30 a.m. but every time I closed my eyes I thought of leaping rainbow trout or some small chore I had forgotten to do, such as put new line on my spinning reel.

The long drive to Michigan's Little Manistee River for the spring steelhead run had the opposite effect on my fishing companions. The three of them — my brother, Orvo Watia, and Henry and Rick Alvarez — lost no time a couple hours earlier falling asleep.

But despite their snoring, I could hear the river through the partially opened camper window. It had a hollow sound similar to a mild wind blowing off the ocean, and mixed in was a gentle gurgling, like that of a baby just discovering her voice for the first time.

The river, probably more than anything, kept me awake. I had never visited it before, but it was like returning to an old friend. I had fished dozens of similar Michigan streams and rivers.

Finally I gave up on the idea of sleep and escaped from the prison wall my brother, Orvo, had formed sleeping next to me in the pickup camper. What was the sense of one hour of sleep. Orvo wanted to hit the river at 4 a.m.

The new line went on my spinning reel. Then I heard the muffled voices of other fishermen. I opened the door of the camper and the cold air slapped me. The sounds of banging pots and pans told me a few fishermen were fixing breakfast, but some had already slipped off into the darkness guided by flashlights.

"Orvo," I said, shaking my brother. He looked into my flashlight, his eyes dull with sleep. "Orvo, they're moving already."

"Really?" he said, not wanting to believe me.

"It's 3:20 and they're moving."

It took a minute for what I was saying to register.

"Geez, we better go," he said, "or we won't get a fishing spot."

The next minutes were hectic. We struggled into snowmobile suits and waders, gathered fishing tackle, grabbed a loaf of bread, sandwich meat, oranges and a few cans of pop. In the darkness we headed down the hill towards the river. Henry and Rick Alvarez would follow later.

The flashlight guided us along on a muddy path set by steelheaders. In the distance we could see other flashlights moving through the trees and bushes.

Orvo, who had taken the lead, moved faster. He was afraid somebody would beat him to his favorite fishing hole.

The air smelled of wood smoke. A few fishermen already had established areas along the river and built small fires to keep warm. They could sit for a couple hours until it became light enough to fish. Nobody would try to take the fishing holes from them as long as they chose to stay there. First come is the law of the steelheader.

A mile in darkness, and we finally reached the fishing hole. We moved too fast. I was sweating inside the snowmobile suit and waders, and because of that, I could suffer when I had to sit out the cold for the morning light.

We arrived just in time. A few minutes later another flashlight appeared. "I was afraid someone would beat me to this spot," the fisherman said. "Anybody fishing this hole on your right?"

"Not yet," Orvo replied. The other fisherman moved in next to us.

Soon another figure materialized in the dark. "I wanted to make sure someone had this hole," he said. "Yesterday I watched a guy take three in a row from here." He moved down to another spot below us.

Orvo took out a pocket knife and while I held the flashlight, he cut up the lunch meat for sandwiches. We sat down on the wet ground to eat. There would be plenty time to rig our fishing rods before it is light enough to toss a spawn sack to the waiting fish.

Why all the effort to establish fishing grounds? Simple. The spring-run rainbow prefer certain holes in the river to hold while moving upstream. Most of those holes are common knowledge among steelheaders who frequent the river, and early in the season such morning races are common.

The angler who fails to reach such holes early enough must settle for nearby water, and it greatly reduces his chances for success.

Visitors from as far away as New England and New York had set up campers in the area in hopes of tangling into the trout moving up river to spawn. The fish average about six to 10 pounds. Occasionally, someone catches one about 15 pounds.

Despite the hour, the river bank was alive with conversation and laughter as anglers awaited that challenge.

Ask Andy

Polar Bear lives for 25 years

Andy sends the Encyclopedia Britannica's Yearbook of Science and the Future to Billy Chisholm, 10, of Oromocto, N.B., Canada, for his question: WHAT IS THE LIFE SPAN OF THE POLAR BEAR?

The majestic white polar bear is full of contradictions. Although he lumbers along in an awkward pigeon-toed fashion, he is amazingly agile, both in and out of the water. He is a crowd-pleaser in captivity, but he often refuses to perform if there is no audience. And though he is a patient hunter, he quickly becomes enraged if he bungles a kill.

The polar bear is a magnificent animal whose size alone inspires amazement. Considered one of the largest carnivorous mammals, the male may reach a whopping 1,600 pounds. He has dense white fur with tinges of yellow and a thick layer of fat to insulate him against the cold. Intelligence, great endurance and a keen sense of smell all serve him well in his treeless, frigid environment, the Arctic.

Because of his great bulk, the polar bear needs enormous quantities of food. The mainstay of his diet is seal meat, and he has clever ways to get it. One is to make a hole in the ice by ramming his head or a chunk of ice aginst the ice floe. Then he waits patiently for a seal to pop his head up the hole for a breath of air. With lightning speed, the bear can flip 500 pounds of seal onto the ice in one well-timed swipe.

In the course of his 25-year life span, he is constantly on the move, sometimes traveling up to 75 miles a week. During the long nine-month Arctic winter, he takes to the ocean. He is a marvelous swimmer and can paddle along effortlessly hour after hour. Partially webbed toes and hair on the bottom of his feet are added assets for swimming and walking on slippery ice. On land, special Arctic sunglasses in the form of a membranous third eyelid protect him from snow blindness.

Although his white fur blends perfectly with the white-blanketed landscape, the polar bear has one problem with his uniform. His black nose sticks out like a beacon. Realizing this, he will hide his nose or cover it with his paws so that prey won't suspect his presence.

Although preoccupied with the constant search for food, the female becomes a model mother when rearing her young. She is usually around 5 years old when her one or two cubs arrive. And for two years after their birth, she provides for and teaches them tenderly and patiently.

The polar bear has two natural enemies. The killer whale has been known to catch bears in the water. And the walrus, three times the bear's size, is a formidable opponent in battle. With long, sharp tusks and thick, leathery hide, the walrus can outswim and drown the bear if confronted. But the walrus is not nearly as intelligent as the polar bear and is usually outwitted.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Sherryl Robertson, 14, of Des Moines, Iowa, for her question:

DO BIRDS EVER FALL OFF THEIR PERCH AT NIGHT?

In the still darkness of night, few birds are up and about. Most settle down for a good night's rest in their favorite tree or nesting spot. To guarantee the sleep is uninterrupted by a terrorizing fall off the branch, nature has endowed birds with a safety guard. The typical perching bird's foot has four toes of medium length — three in front and one in back — which bend snugly around small branches.

The tendons that flex the toes contain the remarkable devices which automatically keep the sleeping bird's grip intact through the night. These tendons are located in the feet under the toe bones. Hundreds of tiny, firm, buttonlike projections are on the lower surface of each tendon. When the bird perches, its weight forces these projections to lock into place. And there they stay until our winged friend decides to get breakfast.

FRILLY LILIES

Plant a pot of little lilies for Easter! Draw around a saucer on white paper. Cut out the circle. Cut it in half. Roll each half into a cone shape and tape.

Starting at the top edge, cut halfway down the cone. Make more cuts like this about ¾ inch apart all the way around the edge. Curl each petal back around a pencil.

Stick a green pipecleaner up through the lily for a stem. Put a little bend at the top so the stem will stay in place. Glue on green paper leaves. Plant the lilies in a paper cup full of small pebbles.

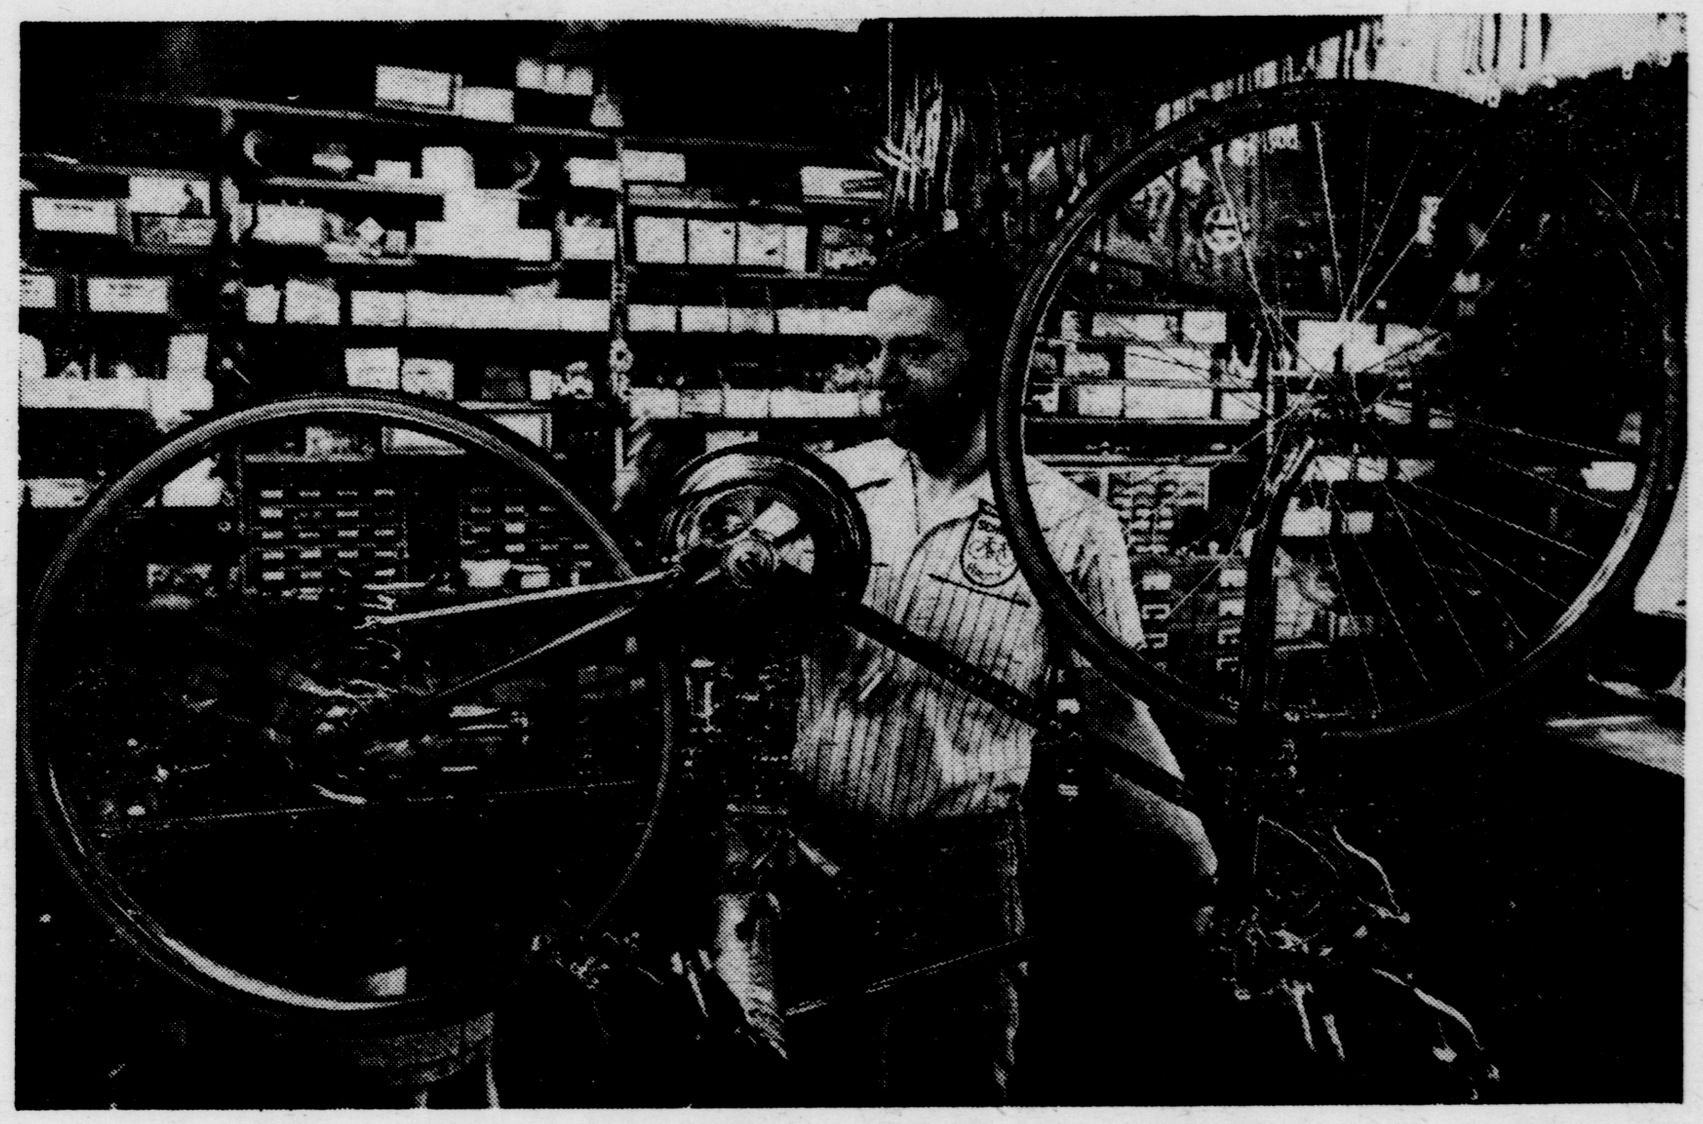
Gauge the tires, test the spokes, check the brakes, and ride on!



Wayne Mikes shows how to check the brakes.

by Clarisse Ritter

The season is here. Winter's inclement weather is behind for another year. Crocus have sprouted promising to paint the earth with their rich purple hue and nubby green buds cover the trees.

While Mother Nature does her thing outdoors, winter's armchair athletes are going through a metamorphosis of their own. Bicycles are coming off garage walls and up from basements as thousands of Northwest suburbanites prepare to feel the wind against their face and the pavement roll along under their tires.

But to ensure that the days ahead not be darkened with personal tragedy or costly bicycle repairs, the cyclist should pause in his eagerness to hit the trail and spend a few minutes checking his vehicle and reacquainting himself with safety habits.

Suggestions on how to do just that were offered by Wayne Mikes, the junior member of Mikes Bike Shop, 36 W. Wilson in Palatine. Wayne's father, Fred, opened the business in 1959. For 17 years he, and more recently with the help of Wayne, has watched the popularity of the sport swell to all age groups and has answered countless "how to" questions.

"I guess the most important thing people don't take care of is pumping up the tires," Wayne said standing amid gadgets and tools.

Under-inflated tires can cause costly rim damage. Tire pressure should be checked every week and proper inflation maintained. It's a simple — often overlooked — task that can save the bicycle owner money.

The pounds of air each tire should maintain is stamped on the side of the tire. Using a tire gauge or a hand pump with a guage, the cyclist can measure how many pounds of air is being pumped into the tire.

Wayne cautions against over-inflating the tire and suggested persons who do not have access to a gauge let the neighborhood gas station attendant help them out.

Those plagued with slow leaks, flat tires and poor valves have no problem providing they take quick action to fix the offender.

Take the tube from inside the tire and spit-test the valve. If bubbles appear, tighten the valve and test again. If bubbles still appear, the only answer is a new valve.

To check the tube itself for leaks, place it in a tub of water and wipe any bubbles caused from submersion. If bubbles reappear, you've got a leak and will need to patch it.

A bicycle's spokes should be checked at the start of the season and may need replacing every other year, Wayne advised. The stress put on the spokes by a 150 or 200-pound cyclist can cause them to loosen. To check one's own spokes, the cyclist should grab the two cross spokes at the point they join and squeeze. "If they squeeze together too easily, you know they should be tightened," Wayne says.

The wheels should be examined for straightness. Hold the bicycle off the ground, spin the wheel and watch. "There should be no more than one-quarter inch play from side to side," Wayne said. If the wheel wobbles more than that, it needs to be straightened.

Bent wheels can often be avoided by

Bikes:

steering around holes in the road and by not going up and down curbs. "That's really not a good thing to ever do to a bicycle," Wayne said of traveling up and down curbs. "You're bound to break something."

Brake cables can stretch with bicycle use and need to be examined. If the brakes do not hit the tire evenly when applied or if one side does not hit, the nut holding the cable should be loosened and the cable pulled through to the proper tension. Tighten the lock nut and you're back in business.

Owner manuals carry specific instructions for brake repair and should be consulted. Repairmen at bicycle shops can also offer hints aimed at problems peculiar to one type or brand of bicycle.

Brake cables should be kept free from rust — a task even the youngest bicycle owner can manage.

Brake pads should be checked. "Brake pads can get hard or the small ridges on them wear down. Then you need new ones because your bike just won't stop the way it should," Wayne said.

Finally, the bicycle's gear system should be checked. The rider may feel the gears slipping during use or making unusual sounds. That's the first sign of trouble which can be avoided with adjustment.

Since gear systems vary in make and complexity, the novice should check with a professional bicycle repairman before tackling the adjustment. One lesson from the pro may be all you'll need to do it yourself the next time.

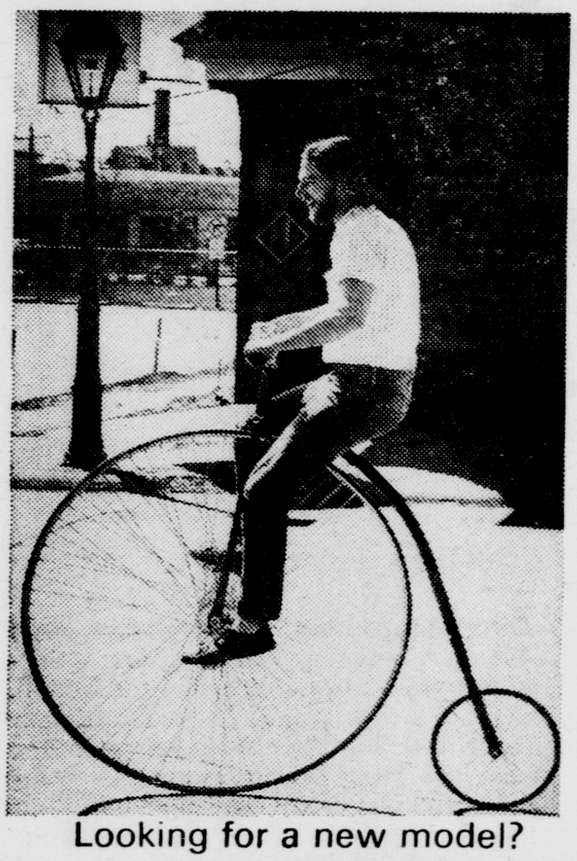
With a little oil on the chains, your bicycle should be ready to roll.

The check points are simple and even the least mechanically inclined person can formulate a preliminary diagnosis of problems.

The simpler the bicycle, the easier it will be to check. Parents should remember to tighten the nuts and bolts on the handlebars and wheels of a tot's tricycle. "If something comes loose, they can get hurt, but all you need is a wrench to tighten up the nuts and bolts," Wayne said.

With the bicycle ready to go, the rider needs to take a look at himself and review safety habits.

"I really think you've got to start with safety," Wayne said. "That's the most important thing I can say."



Looking for a new model?

Children and adults alike take chances with their safety through poor riding habits, Wayne said. "Sometimes I see people all over the road on a bike or not stopping at a sign. What they (bicyclists) have to realize is that a driver may not see them and when there's an accident, it will be you and your bike that gets hurt."

New federal legislation has done much to improve the quality of equipment making bicycles more safe, Wayne said. Cyclists can do more by having proper reflectors and lights on the bicycle for night riding. Cyclists can also have their bicycles checked for safety through many of the various check-up programs sponsored by police and civic organizations, Wayne said.

Cyclists should remember to watch for grates which are parallel to the curb. Getting lodged in the grate can cause the rider to go head first over his handlebars.

Almost as dangerous as a car in motion is a motorist opening his car door into the cyclist's path. With one quick whack the rider may find himself bouncing off the pavement.

Cyclists, however can hurt others and should be on the watch for pedestrians, especially small children. A horn or bell for signaling the unsuspecting person on foot is a good precaution.

With the bike in order and safety imbedded in the cyclist's mind, there remains only one area the cyclist should consider before a long bike hike — his state of physical fitness.

If winter has left the rider without proper exercise, he may want to start out with shorter trips — on an empty stomach. Heavy meals slow riders down and can cause internal discomfort.

Wayne suggests cyclists become more efficient riders by extending the leg straight down while pedaling.

And if you're not in the best physical shape now, a healthy summer atop that shinny two-wheeled beast will help you get back what winter's inactivity ruined.

Take a long ride but do it on an empty stomach.

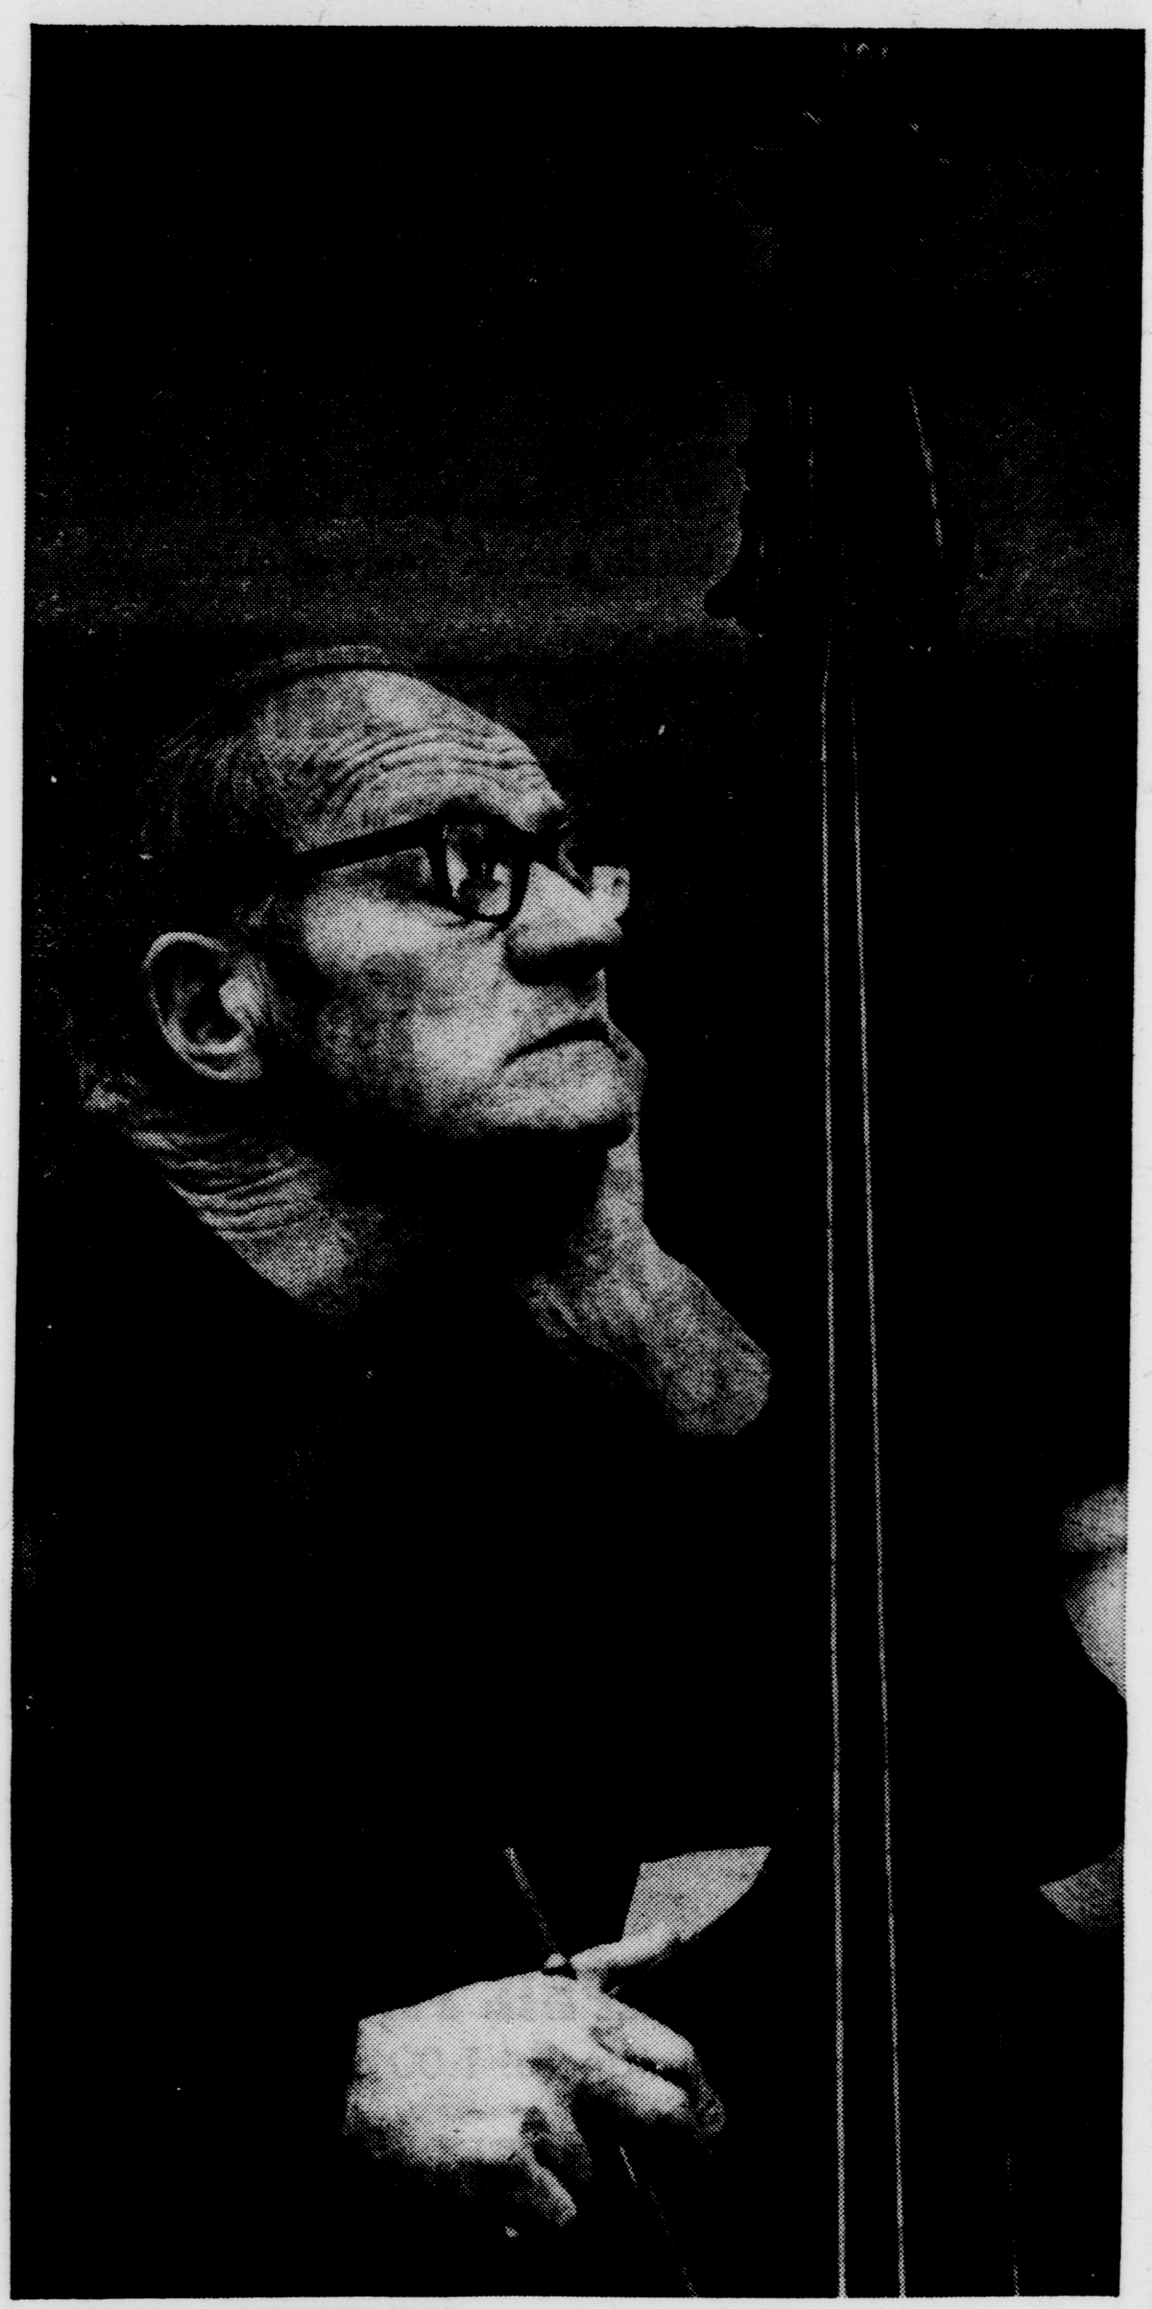
Scoring a comeback



Talent doesn't die at age 65.

Age doesn't matter in this orchestra; attitude counts

by Lois Henderlong

"Old Musicians never die; they just silently fake away" — or so the time-worn adage claims.

Leon Stein and his senior citizens orchestra are proof that it ain't necessarily so.

Before visions of enfeebled pluckers, honkers and piccolo Petes begin dancing in your head, consider these facts: the orchestra, masquerading under the innocuous title 'City Symphony of Chicago' is an all-pro group, 60-strong (in both make-up and age of average player), numbering in its ranks players formerly of such orchestras as the St. Louis and Chicago Symphonies.

Most of those who have never before played in symphony orchestras have spent many years doing less high fallutin', but equally demanding music making, as performers at Bar Mitzvahs, weddings and other extravaganzas. Some sat — and a few continue to sit — in the orchestra of the Lyric Opera and the Grant Park Symphone. Though their fingers have slowed a little and their chops are less flexible now, this line-up could hardly be called feeble.

Conductor Stein qualifies as a senior citizen in age only; in attitude, his vim puts him much nearer 35. At 65, he spends a full day as dean of DePaul University's School of Music, acting as teacher and conductor, as well as administrator. Since his youth, he has been composing steadily, and the recent recording of his string quartets with the Chicago Symphony Quartet, rated a review in The New Yorker magazine. The vigor that characterizes his endeavors may well be the driving force behind the orchestra.

With no fear, he tackles some of the more challenging pieces of symphonic literature. The orchestra has scampered through Mendelssohn's Italian Symphony and is no stranger to the Beethoven symphonies, Berlioz blockbusters and other finger-twisting goodies. About the only music he won't venture into is heady Richard Strauss harmonies; those, he admits, are a little beyond the grasp of his group.

Directions during rehearsals are few; these musicians may not be spring chickens, but there's not a turkey in the bunch. There are a few wrong notes, occasionally a real zinger, but difficulties are rare. One of the few stops was prompted by some halfhearted scratching from the violins in a particularly prickly "Peter and the Wolf" spot. Stein, who doesn't waste words, took care of the problem in short order. "Ay, yi, yi," he yelped. "You don't get paid extra for extra notes."

They don't get paid much even for the notes that aren't extra, but then, money's not really the point. The orchestra was started in 1963 by the American Federation of Musicians, under Stein's direction, because outlets for older musicians were scarce. "The union felt these people still had a lot of music in them," Stein says.

There is a small stipend for each rehearsal and performance, but it wouldn't stretch to pay the rent. Even so, there is a waiting list of hopeful musicians, eager for the chance to play.

Throw out the notion that is is a venture strictly for the over-60 set. Yes, the average instrumentalist in this group is over 60 (a few 40- and 50-year olds sneak in as substitutes), but while it is an orchestra of senior citizens, it is definitely not an orchestra for senior citizens. In fact, this is an orchestra aimed primarily at youth.

Except for its end-of-the-season concert June 29 at De Paul, the orchestra's performances are almost all given in schools — inner city schools, suburban schools, parochial schools, any school willing to pay the nominal fee the union requires for booking the group. Stein views it as educational stimulus for students from more than one standpoint.

There is, of course, the obvious angle — introducing the musical novice to a new world of sounds. But the orchestra tires to give to more than musical newcomers. For the diligent music student, there's the chance to play a concerto with seasoned pros and for high school choirs a rare opportunity to sing with a full orchestra.

"It provides more than one opportunity for schools," Stein says with satisfaction. "It sets exemplary standards and it also allows them to work with professionals."

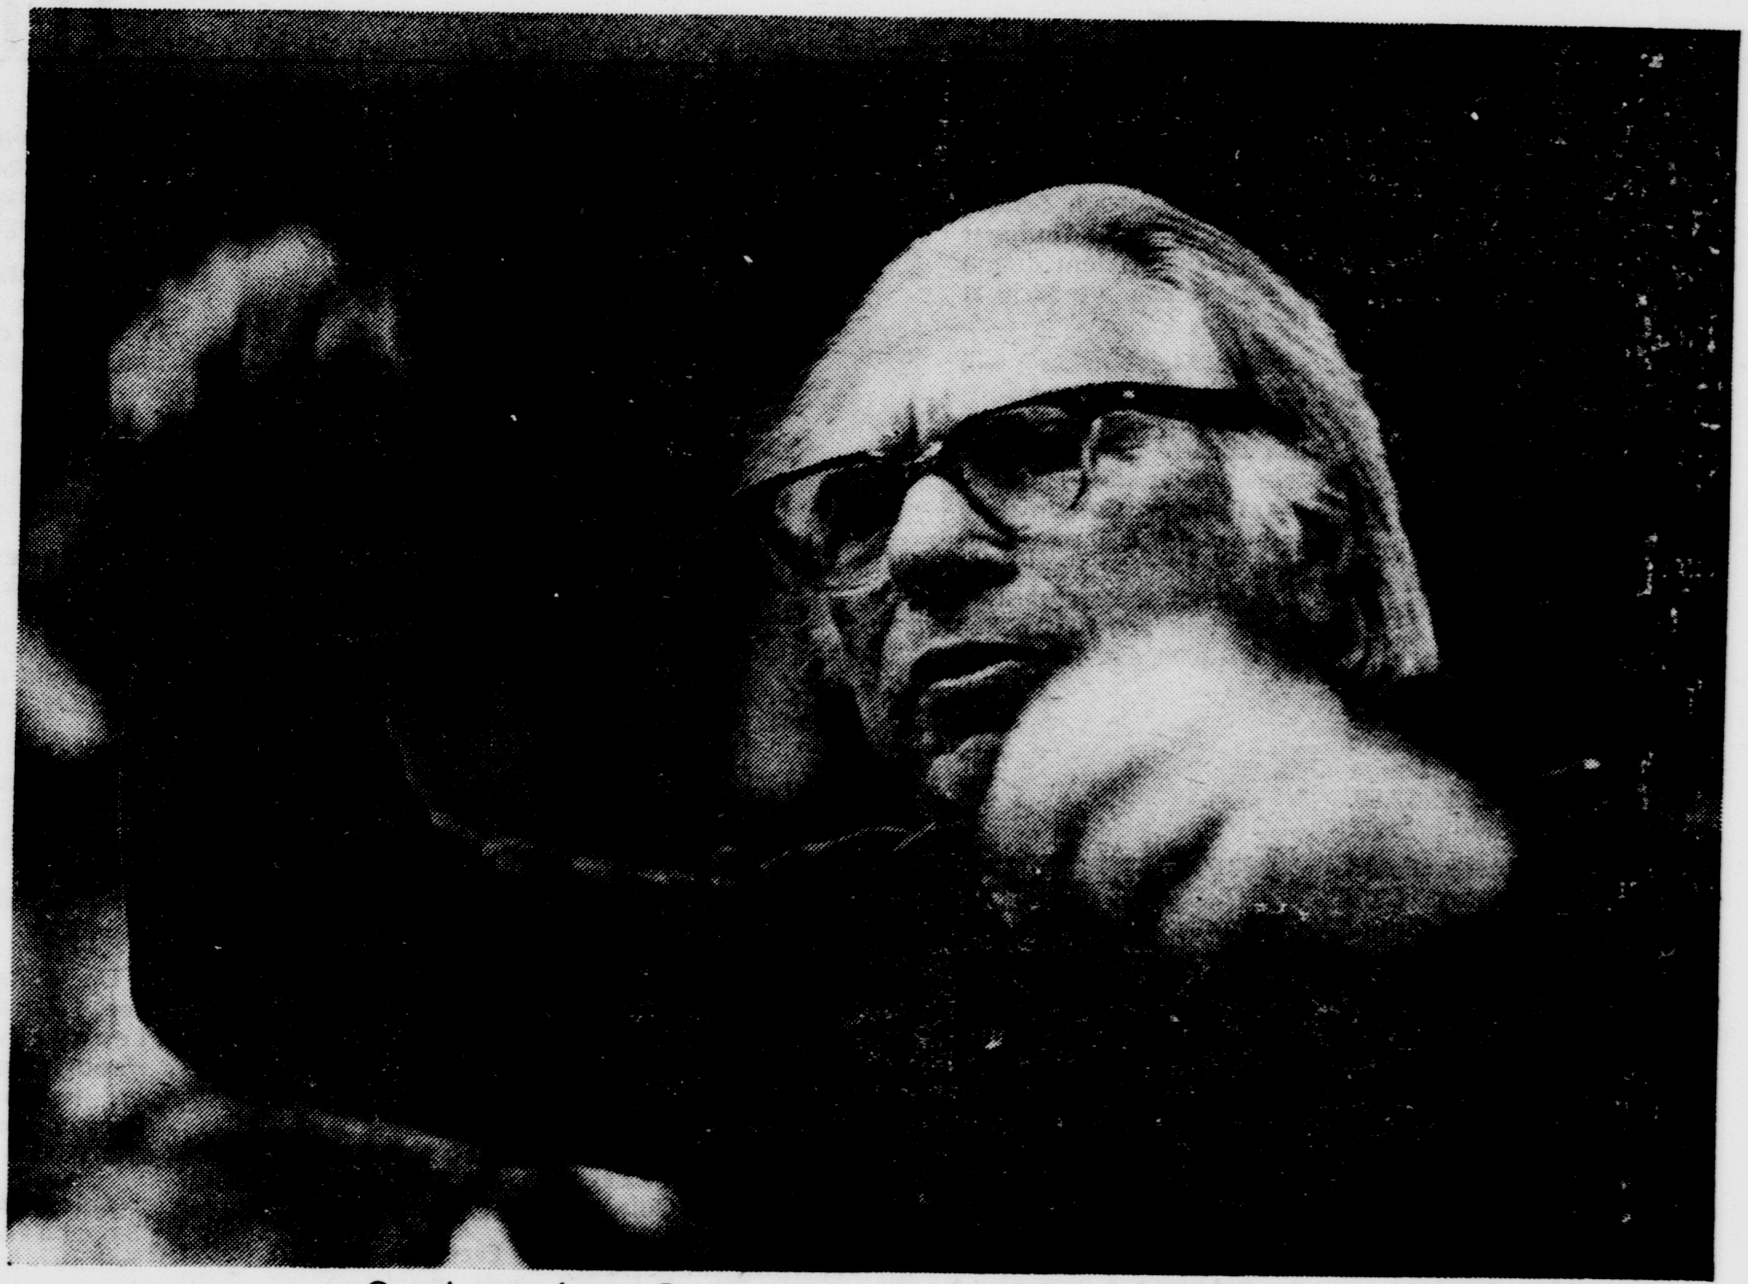
Traumas do happen: a tornado blows into Chicago and the lights in the school darken in the middle of Beethoven. But the orchestra members take it with aplomb. After all the years in the business, they're used to coping with worse.

About the only thing they aren't used to coping with is something more traumatic than a tornado — the onslaught of physical aging. It hasn't hit too many of the 60-year-olds, even those in their seventies, but by the time a musician hits 80, he may have to pull out of the musical circle.

Except for occasional retirements, turnover is light. For those who aren't facile enough any more to make it in the Grant Park or Lyric orchestras, this may well be one of the few opportunities to play for pay. It's a chance to do what they were trained for, what they know best and supplement whatever other income they have.

When Olda Jirousek, cellist in the group, came to the U.S. from Prague in 1923, there were more alternatives. There were more jobs; fewer rules, fewer limitations. There was no law to stop all but union members from pushing a button to raise the opera house curtain. There wasn't even a button to push. Mechanization, specialization and a greater concert with the Great God Time have changed that.

"It is harder now (to get a job)," Jirousek says with a sigh, his voice still carrying a trace of an accent. "You know, when I came over, I joined the union, I got a job right away. When I joined the movie house orchestra (in New York), I was making $100 a week, and that was in 1923. I come to Chicago and the WGN orchestra gave me the same."



Conductor Leon Stein: driving force behind the orchestra

Olda Jirousek, cellist, came from Prague in 1923.

He had migrated from Czechoslovakia without the faintest intention of staying. His only motivation for the trip here was an opportunity to tour with his string trio. But that kind of money and that kind of steady work kept him firmly rooted here. It was the beginning of the breakthrough era, when TV was in its infancy, movies were starting up and live theater was a much less rare Chicago commodity than it is now. For an enterprising musician, there were studio orchestra opportunities galore. During his tenure with the WGN studio orchestra he played for operas and operettas in Medinah Temple, watched Gloria Swanson from the pit when the orchestra played before and after theater productions and can recall seeing Eddie Foy star in "High Button Shoes," playing in a theater that doesn't exist any more.

By the time the Depression ended, so had many of the musical groups that had played a large part in Chicago's arts scene. By then, he and his wife had acquired another love besides music. He bought his first white elephant — of the marble variety — and that was the beginning of his antique shop.

By now, he's graduated from white elephants to clocks, "Their tick-tock, the exact bing-bong of them — I like to listen to the sound," says the man who has spent his life listening to sounds. His favorite clock has only four marks for the time, instead of 12, and it has only one hand. "That's all they needed when that clock was made," he says. "Then there wasn't such a hurry. Then time wasn't so precious."

Not being the type to mope over missed chances or bygone glories, Olda Jirousek doesn't look downcast about continual change — at least, not much. Instead, he fingers the 100-year-old mahogany music stand in his store window with satisfaction and revels in the consummate workmanship that makes it not only functional but a work of art. The kind of music stand they made when beauty, more than time, was of the essence.

Time for George Seifert, as for Olda Jirousek, is a matter of great concern though not for the same reasons. He never has quite enough of it, though now that he's 76 and semi-retired, it would seem as though there should be free hours aplenty. If he didn't insist upon teaching and preaching long and hard to the students who come to his apartment for lessons, perhaps there would be more time. But as it is, his schedule of students takes up a goodly number of hours in his day, which is the way he thinks it should be.

Time tables never worked very well for Seifert, the City Symphony's principal second violin, who started playing violin as a boy in Dresden, Germany.

"I hear my friend in school tell me about his teacher, how fantastic," he says. "And I think, I will go to him too. But it was no good — if he ran over with my friend's lesson to 40 minutes, then my lesson became 20 minutes," and his mouth, like Santa's, becomes all tied up in a bow as he explains earnestly that teachers must give more of themselves than that.

The world outside changed, but the world inside Seifert's second story flat retains an old-world feel. His walls are decorated with muted pastel murals of the seasons — spring, summer, fall. No winter. They have a faintly Oriental look, but they're not really quite exotic.

In one corner of a room crammed with furniture a bookcase of near-mausoleum proportions houses old books, older scores and irreplaceable out-of-print orchestral parts. George Seifert has been collecting them since he got his musical start long ago and far away in Dresden.

He began his career as a violinist with the Dresden State Opera orchestra and moved to Chicago when Theodore Stock, then conductor of the Chicago Symphony,

Indian tribes to display arts and crafts

Members of Indian tribes from throughout the U.S. will display their arts and crafts today and Sunday at the Lincoln Park Center, an enclosed shopping mall in Chicago.

More than 50 exhibitors will be at the show which features demonstrations of ancient arts and crafts. Because of the absence of written tribal history of the skills and techniques used, Indian people learned by example and handed their skills down through generations.

Silver and turquoise jewelry, beadwork, pottery, sandsculptures and sandpaintings, baskets, wood carvings and rugs from the southwest tribes will be on display.

Oils, watercolors and pen and ink drawings by students and amateurs and professional artists from the Chicago Indian Artists Guild will also be exhibited.

The First Annual American Indian Fine Arts Show is sponsored by the American Indian Business Association of Chicago and the Midwest. The show is open noon to 9 p.m. today and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday at the mall, 2520 N. Lincoln Ave.

"The Brookfield Zoo Album," a showing of more than 100 photographs of the zoo, its animals and visitors, will be on display at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg starting Monday.

The collection, on exhibit through April 17, was done by Leland La France in his seven years as the zoo's photographer.

Correction

Upcoming concerts sponsored by the Chicago Area Theatre Organ Enthusiasts were incorrectly printed in last week's Leisure.

The group will sponsor a concert May 11 at the Oriental Theater, Randolph and State streets, Chicago, at 8 p.m. Hector Olivera will play.

There will be no concerts this year at the Deerpath Theater in Lake Forest or the Coronado Theater in Rockford.

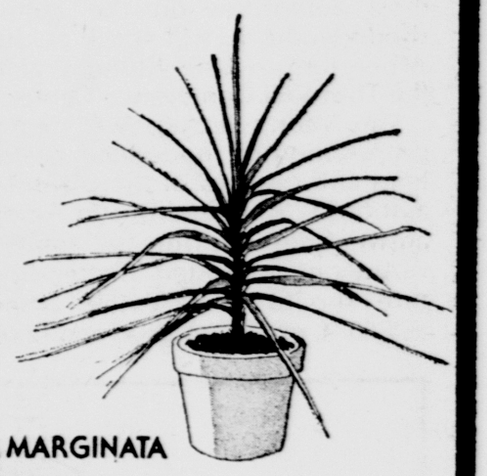
Welcome Spring with FREE Greenery from the Bank of Elk Grove

JADE PLANT

RUBBER PLANT

SWEDISH IVY



DRACAENA MARGINATA

The Bank of Elk Grove wants your spring to be a little greener! We'll give you your choice of one of six beautiful foliage plants valued at more than $10 each just for qualifying for our Cash Reserve plan or for making a $300 savings deposit. Here are the details:

1. Qualify for Cash Reserve. This is an automatic line of credit on a regular checking account. It lets you write yourself a loan — up to an established limit — simply by drawing a check.

If you are a checking customer now, come in or call for a Cash Reserve application. Or, open a new checking account with $100 or more and apply for Cash Reserve at the same time.

Either way, you'll be notified within a few days whether you're eligible for Cash Reserve. When you are, you can pick up your plant at the bank. (You must apply for Cash Reserve no later than April 24 to be eligible for this plant offer.)

And, later in the year, you'll receive another benefit for being a Cash Reserve customer — a special card that will let you transact banking business and get cash anytime, seven days a week, through "MAC", the Bank of Elk Grove's 24-hour teller to be installed this summer.

2. Save $300. Deposit $300 in a new or existing savings account, and select the plant you want. At the Bank of Elk Grove you'll find all our savings plans earn the highest bank interest rates allowed by law.

Plants may be picked up at the bank during regular lobby hours — this offer good only as long as our supply lasts. Limit one gift per family please.

Qualifying deposits must be funds new to the Bank of Elk Grove and remain on deposit for not less than 6 months, or cost of premium will be deducted.

Tickets on sale for housewalk on Oak Park's Forest Avenue

Tickets are on sale now for a housewalk, May 8 on Oak Park's Forest Avenue, known for its architecture around the country.

Twelve houses in the 200, 300 and 400 blocks will be open to the public, many for the first time, including five designed by Frank Lloyd Wright and one by Prairie School architect, E.E. Roberts. Also shown will be century-old houses and classics in the Italianate, Victorian, Queen Anne and Georgian styles. Many of the houses were built before 1900.

The house walk is sponsored by neighbors of the Thomas De Caro family, whose Wright home at 313 Forest, known as the Hills House, burned Jan. 3 after several months of restoration.

Proceeds from the walk will help in the rebuilding of Hills House.

Tickets are $15 each and may be ordered from the Forest Avenue Historical District Assocation, 423 Forest Ave., Oak Park, Ill. 60302. Make check payable to "Neighbors Walks Together Trust Fund."

For tour information call 383-7270. Hours for the walk will be 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Park District Flower Show opens today at Chicago conservatories

Lilies, hyacinths, tulips, daffodils and hydrangeas will be on display starting today at the Chicago Park District 64th Annual Spring and Easter Flower Show at Garfield and Lincoln Park Conservatories.

Admission is free to the show open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. until April 25. The featured flower in the show is the lily, symbolic of the Easter season. A large floral cross with white Easter lilies and other varieties will be featured at both conservatories.

Other flowers on exhibit are cinerarias, primulas in a variety of colors, wax begonias and astilbes. Free guide service will be provided for school and civic groups, but arrangements must be made in advance. To make reservations, call 294-4770 for the Lincoln Park Conservatory and 533-1281 for Garfield Park Conservatory.

Arboretum hosts rhododendron expert

Ted Van Veen, one of the nation's foremost authorities on the cultivation of rhododendrons, will speak at the Morton Arboretum in Lisle Monday at 8 p.m. in the Thornhill Conference Center.

Van Veen's lecture will deal with the propogation of rhododendrons and problems and diseases of the plant. Van Veen, author of "Rhodendrons in America," will answer questions from the audience.

Any one interested in attending the lecture should contact the arboretum at 968-0074, ext. 29, to reserve a seat.

New bulk-mail stamp April 23

The U.S. Postal Service April 23 will issue a 7.9-cent coil stamp for use by bulk mailers holding pre-cancel permits.

The adhesive meets the new bulk rate mail which went into effect in December, 1975 and replaces the 6.3-cent stamp released Oct. 1, 1974.

First day ceremonies will be held in Miami, Florida in conjunction with Stamporee '76 USA, an international philatelic exhibition sponsored by the Florida Federation of Stamp Clubs and the Cuban Philatelic Club of Miami.

The stamp will be available for philatelic purposes in unprecanceled form at philatelic centers and from the Philatelic Sales Division. Collectors must purchase a minimum of ten stamps or, if a line pair is desired, a minimum of 30 stamps must be purchased.

Precancel forms of the new adhesive will be printed only in coils of 500 and 3000 stamps. Both versions will be in red ink on canary paper and follow the design of other issues in the Americana Series of regular postage stamps.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations should send their requests to "7.9-cent Coil Stamp, Postmaster, Miami, FL. 33152" enclosing the proper remittance which, in this case, is 16-cents per cover — the cost of the two new stamps needed to meet first class mail rates.

Post offices throughout the country have been authorized to hand-cancel U.S. postage stamps affixed to the new $2 bills being issued by the Treasury Department April 13.

This will be a one-day service only and no mail order cancellations will be available.

Each bill presented for cancellation must bear at least 13-cents in postage and be handed to the postal clerk for the standard cancellation. There will be no pictorial or special cancellations used.

April 13 is the birthday of Thomas Jefferson whose portrait appears on the front of the new bills. The reverse of the note bears a rendition of John Trumbull's painting "The Declaration of Independence."

Orchestra:

heard him and spirited him away to the U.S.

As time went on, he devoted more and more time to teaching, less and less to playing. And he's found that playing professionally isn't what it used to be. "It's not a family, like it was," he says with a shake of his head. "The orchestra once was a big family, but now it's not."

Not everything has changed for the worse. When he recalls the 1940s, the 1950s, it is a reminder that time is not always a villain. Twenty, thirty years ago — that was when the "fear" conductors were still going strong. Great musicians like George Szell and Chicago Symphony conductor Fritz Reiner were getting their ways, because they were brilliant — and because they weren't averse to screaming, threatening and browbeating. Seifter remembers those days well, but he doesn't regret their passing. He only regrets that musicians had to live through them — and that some didn't.

"His (Fritz Reiner's) concertmaster fell straight from his chair of a heart attack," Seifert says. "He was a very, very hard man. I accuse him pointblank of killing four people. As a musician, a God, but as a human being, that's different."

There are other changes that disturb him. He speaks ruefully about the change in students, about their lack of dedication, about the way World War II changed attitudes.

"After that war, students don't want anymore to practice five or six hours a day. They want to go to a factory, make lots of money. Atomic research . . . that's money."

But perhaps worst of all is the sight of women invading what used to be a man's musical territory. "Look, this is a joke — now it's all ladies, but a handful of men. This will not work. If you are a gentleman, you give in to the ladies, they are prima donnas and you suffer for it," he says with vehemence.

Jessie Buchtel, a small gray-haired lady who plays viola for the City Symphony, might find that hard to swallow. She'll tell you that although life has improved for female artists, it's still no musical picnic. Married straight out of school, she has never had to support herself, but her cellist daughter, who plays in the Houston Symphony Orchestra, is doing so, and it's rough going.

"You have to play five times as well as men to compete with men," she says trimly. "Some places don't hear us much. There are still only two or three out of 65 in European orchestras."

Yes, she thinks women are winning a little more acceptance; at least there are a few more women in orchestras than there used to be. "But they still usually hire you if they're short (of people)," she says.

And yet, she's not really pessimistic. The changes may be slow, and time may not always he cooperative, but at least attitudes aren't standing still. And now, with a granddaughter beginning in the string music program of her grade school, the third generation of women musicians can pick up the crusade that Jessie Buchtel never really had to fight in her career and that her daughter is still in the midst of. It's one case where time may be the hero.

Jessie Buchtel: first in a family of musicians.

Violence breeds aggression

How TV affects children

Adults may think that a small screen and commercial interruptions are among television's disadvantages, but as parents they had better think twice.

According to a study commissioned by ABC and conducted over a five year period among 10,000 children age 8-13 in the New York-Connecticut-New Jersey area, the less the child's depth of concentration on violent programming, the smaller the inclination toward aggression that the violence produces.

The study, conducted by Lieberman Research Inc., indicated a definite link between realistic violence and children's inclination toward aggression.

The study used "The Untouchables" — considered an alltime high (or low, depending on your view) in the area of TV violence — as a benchmark against which to compare current programs.

The boys used in the violence study (a concurrent study used both boys and girls to learn their reaction to pro-social program content), were asked to hit an electronic pounding platform before and after watching television violence.

When the kids saw "The Rookies" they indicated a higher increase in aggression than when they saw "The Streets of San Francisco," for instance, while "Harry O," among current programs, produced little inclination toward violence.

Whether in action-adventure or true children's programs, the youngsters tended to higher levels of aggressive inclination as realism increased or when they were faced with programs involving children in dangerous situations.

Introduction of humor and commercial interruptions both tended to diminish violence reactions, and aggressive inclination went up when programs with violence were viewed on a movie size screen instead of a conventional TV set.

The results of the study confirmed again what other studies have indicated for years. Just because a youngster sees a bank robbery on a cop show doesn't mean he will run out and stick up the local pizza parlor. But violence on screen does breed an inclination toward aggression off screen.

The Lieberman study also showed an increase in aggressive inclination when the kids watched news shows, whether they contained violence or not. The conclusion was that while more study was needed, perhaps the kids were just annoyed at being presented with news instead of pure entertainment.

These findings are contrary to a study conducted in Britain some years ago which indicated the realism of televised news violence frightened children more than almost any fictional mayhem.

Part of that apparent paradox might be that during those years violence on news programs so often involved children — whether they were being blown up in a church in Alabama or in a rice paddy in Southeast Asia.

As any parent who has sat through an episode of the ubiquitous Flintsones for the umpteenth time can tell you, repeats have little influence on how children react. The study found that children reacted to violence in repeat with about the same amount of aggressive inclination as they did the first time around. It's only the adults whose aggressive inclination goes up with repitition.

CBS fall line-up

Out goes the bad, in comes the dull

by Joan Hanauer

Two-thirds of the new fall schedule now has been unveiled and what's coming up looks about as exciting as warmed-over meatloaf.

CBS last year raised hopes and eyebrows by dramatically shifting its schedule in an uproar of "creative CBS programing" and also premiered the much-ballyhooed "Beacon Hill."

The schedule was almost as bad for CBS as "Beacon Hill," an Edsel of a television series, and even so hardy a contender as 'M-A-S-H" needed midseason reshuffling back to Tuesday nights to heal its wounded ratings.

CBS decided it had received its message, and the programming for the new season is notably lacking in innovation.

Two oldies and three new shows will bite the dust — "Medical Center," "Cannon," "Bronk," "Popi" and "Sara."

They will be replaced by three hour-long shows and three half-hour situation comedies, along with a bit of shifting among the shows that remain.

Two of the newcomers are television series versions of successful films, and a third comes from the world of sports — "Ball Four," starring ex-Yankee pitcher, author and sports announcer Jim Bouton.

Here's a rundown on the newcomers:

"Delvecchio," which will air on Sunday night at 9 p.m., following "Kojak," presents Judd Hirsch as "an outspoken and brilliant big city police detective" with a law degree and a flair for conducting unpopular investigations.

Two new shows are penciled in for Monday nights — "All's Fair" and "Executive Suite." "Executive Suite," scheduled to air at 9 p.m. may be the most interesting of the new shows and the answer to CBS' search for a dramatic series that explores human problems, not criminal practices.

Where it failed with "Beacon Hill" it might succeed with this study of "the interpersonal conflicts of executives, office workers, factory hands and their families against the backdrop of a large corporation." Included in the large cast is Stephen Elliott, who played Father Lassiter on "Beacon Hill."

In case the title sounds familiar, the inspiration for "Executive Suite" was the movie of the same name starring William Holden, Barbara Stanwyck and Fredric March.

Directly preceding it is "All's Fair," a half-hour sitcom starring Richard Crenna as an ultra-conservative newspaper columnist in his 40s, and Bernadette Peters as a way-out liberal photographer in her 20s. Norman Lear is executive producer, so count on them arguing politics in a half-hour primal scream.

Wednesday at 7 p.m. will be the new home of "Good Times," followed at 7:30 by "Ball Four," with Bouton and friends revealing the funny side of locker room and bullpen among the "Washington Americans" major league ball club.

"All In The Family" will be next, acting as lead-in for "Alice," based on the movie "Alice Doesn't Live Here anymore." It features Linda Lavin as a new widow who takes up waitressing to support herself and her precocious son, aged 12.

Friday night CBS will try a new adventure show at 7-8 p.m. That's family time and "Spencer's Pilots" is the only newcomer to the schedule that appears to be specially tailored to appeal to kid audience. It stars a pair of pilots who work for the crusty owner of a dilapidated flying company and will pilot anything with wings.

ABC plans more cop shows

A cop with a robot as his partner? You'll see it this fall on ABC.

ABC has announced nine new programs for its fall line-up, shows that offer little variety from the current television fare. There are more comedies and cop and private eye shows. Robert Stack returns to the TV screen playing, what else, a big-city policeman.

Nancy Walker, currently known as Rhoda's Mom, and Tony Randall, the odder part of "The Odd Couple," both star in their own comedy series. And "Charlie's Angels," a made-for-TV movie about three beautiful private eyes which premiered last month, has become a series.

Bill Cosby expands on his pudding commercials with kids with a musical variety show designed for youngsters and The Captain & Tennille move from records to TV with a variety series of their own.

The new shows are:

"The Bill Cosby Show, 6 p.m. Sunday. Cosby hosts a show for kids. Performers will include acrobats, jugglers, magicians, puppets and chimps.

"Captain & Tennille," 7 p.m. Monday. The popular singing team will host a variety of guests in a musical-comedy variety show.

"The Nancy Walker Show," 8 p.m. Tuesday. Miss Walker stars as Nancy Kitteridge, talent agent, in this series developed by Norman Lear.

"The Tony Randall Show," 8:30 p.m. Tuesday. Randall plays Walter Franklin, a judge of the Superior Court of Philadelphia, competent in court but incompetent off the bench with a sub-teen son, a strong-willed daughter and an addled housekeeper.

"Charlie's Angels," 9 p.m. Wednesday. Three female private investigators, all former policewomen, work for a highly successful but never seen private eye named Charlie.

"Most Wanted," 9 p.m. Thursday. Robert Stack is a homicide agent working at a major urban police department.

"Holmes and Yoyo," 7 p.m. Saturdays. Holmes, an old-line cop, is continually frustrated by his partner Yoyo, a robot.

"Mr. T and Tina," 7:30 p.m. Saturdays. A widowed Japanese businessman, newly arrived in Chicago, unwittingly hires a scatterbrained American girl as governess for his children.

"Feather and Father," 9 p.m. Saturday. Harold Gould is a former con man who has lost neither the knack nor the urge to swindle and Steatanie Powers plays his daughter, a criminal defense lawyer.

Gossip? Rona calls it news

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Gossip still flourishes in Hollywood, New York and the watering holes of Europe as attested by the sprouting of national weekly papers filled with rumors and half truths.

Traditional gossip columns, however, all but disappeared with the deaths of the scolding guardians of celebrity morals, Louella Parsons and Hedda Hopper.

Today the leading authority on gossip is Rona Barrett, who is a regular member of ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show.

She also publishes two fan magazines, "Rona Barrett's Hollywood" and "Rona Barret's Gossip," which, she says, have a combined circulation of 1 million copies.

The term "Gossip" doesn't sit with the diminutive Miss Barrett, who is Mrs. William Trowbridge in private life. She prefers to think of herself as a reporter.

"Walter Winchell once said gossip is tomorrow's news," Rona said, relaxed in her chic Beverly Hills home adjacent to Kirk Douglas' mansion.

"One dictionary definition of gossip is 'the dissemination of news' and that is what I live by."

She also has a staff of 10 legmen and helpers on the payroll who cover leads from hundreds of sources in Hollywood and abroad.

Rona feels she doesn't get proper recognition as a newsperson from her colleagues, despite the fact her activities have made her a national television figure and a financial heavyweight.

She predicted an Anthony Armstrong-Jones, Princess Margaret breakup in 1973. The fact top network news teams don't pick up the story until the official announcement is made apparently doesn't bother her.

That, essentially, it would seem, is the principal difference between gossip and news.

"I use all the verifying facts available to me," Rona said. "Sometimes I spend days and weeks checking an item. Right now there's a big story I've been working on for two months, but I won't go on the air with it until I'm sure."

RONA BARRETT

There remains plenty of grist for the gossip mills, according to Rona. These days the names that crop up most frequently on her shows and in her magazines are bachelors Jack Nicholson and Warren Beatty along with Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis.

"Elizabeth Taylor has become boring," she said. "And the public is absolutely more interested in television personalities generally than movie stars.

"The structure has changed since the days of Parsons and Hopper. The public has become unshockable. When Ingrid Bergman deserted her family for Roberto Rossellini, it was an international scandal. Today no one would raise an eyebrow.

"The housewife and the stock broker have come out of the closet. They've always done the same thing the stars do. They just wouldn't admit it. But readers and viewers still love to be titillated.

"It's not my mission in life to make or break stars. Parsons and Hopper were powerful figures who could ruin careers.

"But almost everybody in the world enjoys gossip. Look at People magazine. It has a tremendous circulation and it is based on the fact that human beings love to read about one another."

Rona says she has suppressed many a juicy item because the facts were cruel or injurious to a star's reputation or their children.

Still, she has made her share of enemies, not the least of whom is Frank Sinatra, who has called her any number of names from the stage during his concerts. Rona shrugs it all off.

TV movie features the Peanuts gang

Snoopy, the Peanut beagle who collects Van Gogh and Wyeth originals instead of bones, may occasionally be too busy with his cultural pursuits to help his Peanut pals.

He may be subject to recurring illusions of superiority. And he may deserve his reputation for helping his team lose baseball games. But there is one field in which the cantankerous canine wins over all the Peanuts people.

Says his creator, Charles M. Schulz, "Snoopy is the easiest character to draw and possibly the most fun."

The dogmatic, long-eared Peanut stars in a solitary ice ballet while Charlie Brown participates in a spelling bee in "A Boy Named Charlie Brown," the first Peanuts animated motion picture to air Friday at 7 p.m. on CBS.

The movie stars Charlie Brown, Snoopy, Linus, Lucy, Schroeder and the rest of the Peanut clan in a 90-minute adventure that finds hapless Charlie doing his thing — running the gamut from trauma to triumph and back again.

The movie was written by Schulz who believes Snoopy fulfills all the requirements for a perfect Peanut.

"From the standpoint of the artist, a really good comic strip character is not only fun to draw but, by the very nature of its personality, a creator of its own situations," said Schulz. "Snoopy is flexible and it really doesn't matter much if the nose gets a little too long or too short. He still retains his unmistakable identity."

Shelby Lyman on chess

Why do men play chess better than women? Explanations typically range from the ludicrous to the more ludicrous.

For example, one grandmaster asserts that "women play worse because they have no subconscious urge to kill their father."

Much more enlightening is the explanation offered by Milunka Lazarevic of Yugoslavia, a top woman player, who says:

"We play worse chess, basketball, tennis, etc., because we have the job of bringing into the world all those clever men who do it better."

In the same vein, Nona Gaprindasvili, the world's first woman grandmaster, recently commented on her own three month absence from competitive chess: "After all, I have a son, a husband and a mass of family obligations."

Can you imagine Bobby Fischer or Anatoly Karpov beset with similar responsibilities: Mothers or housepersons of the year they might have become. But not world champions of chess!

BEGINNER'S CORNER — Hint and Explanation: The centralized black knight is undefended.

Nona Gaprindasvili's best-known game was played against the German Player Servaty at Dortmund in 1974. An unusually aesthetic double-rook sacrifice made that encounter a classic.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

South looked over the dummy. He counted 12 easy tricks. The 13th was there if he could drop the queen of hearts, singleton, doubleton or tripleton or finesse successfully against it. Then there just might be a squeeze. South decided to keep open as many options as possible.

He won the club in his hand; played three rounds of trumps and his ace and king of spades. He ruffed his last spade; came back to his hand with the king of hearts and cashed his next to last trump to leave himself with one trump, one heart and two clubs.

West had to come down to four cards also. He had already discarded a club and a heart; he had to chuck one more heart.

South didn't have any further worries. He simply discarded dummy's nine of clubs, led a heart to the ace, ruffed a heart and made the last two tricks with dummy's jack of heart and ace of clubs.

Old coins will be evaluated at Coin Festival April 25

How much are old coins worth?

If you have some you can learn their value at the Morton Grove Coin Club's annual Spring Coin Festival April 25 at the Leaning Tower YMCA, 6300 W. Touhy Ave., Niles.

Admission is free to the show, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The club will have a "coin origin and evaluation booth" manned by club members using the latest coin guide. At no charge, they'll estimate the value of coins brought by visitors. In the case of foreign coins, they may be able to provide historical information.

Also featured at the show will be a bourse section with 25 coin dealers and a special Bicentennial "Americana" exhibit tracing the history of the U.S. through its coins and currency.

Members of the club come from the Chicago area and meetings are every third Friday of the month at the Oketo Park Fieldhouse, 8950 Oketo, Morton Grove.

Chauffeur of the stars

His limousine has 22-karat gold trim

ST. LOUIS — Joey Heatherton is shy, Helen Reddy likes hot tea and honey after a performance, and Ed McMahon drinks watered-down cocktails, according to the chauffeur for the stars.

Joseph E. Dellerman, known as Jed from his initials, actually is a lot more than a chauffeur. Along with a fleet of seven white limousines comes his own personal service.

He not only meets the stars at planeside, but awakens them, sometimes helps dress them, and makes sure they're on time for interviews and shows.

"There's a lot more to my service than 'Here's the car, get in. Here's the end of the line, get out'," he said. "I'll be backstage at performances with a towel, a bottle of soda or hot tea. Sometimes I'll whisper to them before they go on stage, 'This is Kiel Auditorium in St. Louis.' Their minds are so preoccupied with the show they might forget where they are."

He grins recalling one voluptuous country and western singer in skintight pants.

"She was standing at centerstage introducing the group," he said. "She turned to the piano player at her right, the string section at her left and was about to acknowledge the drummer at her rear when I motioned her offstage. The entire seam of her pants had ripped out. I stapled her up and sent her back out."

Jed's cars also are something special. A recent interview took place in the backseat of a white limousine equipped with white mink door paneling, white mouton carpets and 22-karat gold trim on the doors and dash.

The car, which cost $25,000, has four, rather than the usual six windows "for a little privacy and some distinction."

Jed started out as a cab driver, built a car dealership specializing in Cadillacs; and now is considering turning solely to his chauffeuring service. Among showbiz personalities frequenting his service are Pat Boone, Sammy Davis Jr., Doc Severinsen, Olivia Newton-John, Rona Barrett, Charlie Rich, O. J. Simpson, Buffalo Bob Smith, Tammy Wynette and Anita Bryant.

"Joey Heatherton is entirely different than her mattress commercial image," he said. "She's very shy, very congenial, very appreciative. She still has fears in crowds. She usually holds my hand."

He told of making the rounds of cocktail parties with McMahon.

"People at a party would be guzzling down the free booze and I'd be making weak drinks for Ed," Jed explained. "They only have one party, but he has to go to eight or 10 so he likes his drinks with very little liquor in them."

Security is a major preoccupation of show business personalities and a large part of Jed's job.

"I had the Ambassador of Iran in the car when he ran into a student protest," he said. "The FBI and police couldn't keep the crowd back. They like to tore this car apart."

A similar incident occurred with Charley Pride. "The fans are well meaning but they get carried away," he said. "Most entertainers have a fear of being trapped by crowds, of being trampled to death. You get three or four feet away from them and they get panicky."

Jed doesn't favor rock groups ("A seltzer and food fight in one of the cars kind of turned me off.") but he does identify and socialize with country and western stars. He himself likes that extra bit of flash.

From his iguana-skin boots to his suspiciously blond hair, the 55-year-old Dellerman could be mistaken for one of his clients. His pinkie is weighed down by a 10-karat diamond ring which says "Jed," and he has another eight karats on his watchband and two on a silver dollar hanging from his neck.

"I get a real kick out of meeting these people," he said.

"Everyone of them is interesting. I've never had a bummer. I see the other side of performers. If you could put that part on stage it would be marvelous."

Barber closes shop

Farewell to the 25-cent haircut

Harrisonburg, Va. — For 38 years, Strode Higginbotham charged the same price at his small, old-fashioned barbershop: two bits for a haircut and 65 cents for "The Works" — cut, shampoo and shave.

He managed to maintain the post-Depression price through a world war, hard time recessions and spiraling inflation.

But Wednesday Higginbotham, 68, gave his last 25-cent haircut and the shop, with its potbellied stove and faded linoleum floor, closed for good.

The building that houses it will be razed to make way for a parking lot for an adjoining restaurant.

"I was probably the last barber in the country to charge a quarter," said "Hickey," as he is known by his customers. "I never saw reason to increase the price so I didn't."

Most of Higginbotham's customers were older men, who preferred short haircuts and the shop's quaint atmosphere. The linoleum was cracking but a wooden bench and a row of pre-World War II theater seats held up well.

Nine mirrors lined the walls and an old radio often was tuned to a local country music station.

"It'll be a shame, but that's life," said the soft-spoken barber.

"I've got a part-time job lined up at another barber's in town — Steele's — and I guess my customers will go over there," he said. "But they will be paying more than a quarter."

Steele's charges $1.50 for a haircut.

Higginbotham said he never raised the price because rent had remained at $20 a month since the late 1940s and, with frugal living, he always made enough for him and his wife to get by.

"I felt like making a living and never saw reason to charge high," he said. "I've never taken a vacation in my life and I don't plan to. The only time I ever was off was when I was sick."

Since he started getting Social Security three years ago, Higginbotham has worked only three days a week, but about 10 hours a day.

He plans to go on working at his new job as long as possible.

"I just work from day to day, you know, looking forward to tomorrow."
